U. S. Will Let Farmers Fix 1937 Wheat, Corn Acreage

Won't Curb or Abet Any Attempts to Recoup Drought Losses.

Farm Prices Rise 1% During Week

By Robert C. Albright.

Heavy plantings of wheat and corn next year by farmers seeking to recoup drought losses, and hoping to cash in on high prices, will be neither restrained nor encouraged by the Government, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said yesterday.

Wallace envisaged the possibility of an 800,000,000-bushel crop next year, with 150,000,000 bushels for export and additional carryover, if farmers plant as much or more then they did this year, and "ordinary" weather prevails.

These views were expressed by the Administration's farm chieftain during a press conference at which he assailed "amateurs" whom he said are spreading reports that the present short crop and increased wheat importations were caused by the soil conservation program. He said this year's plantings, as a matter of fact, were much heavier than normal.

The present high prices of wheat and corn will lead farmers to plant certainly as many acres as they did this year, and probably more, Wallace said. He declared the Administration will continue its soil conservation program, but will be guided by meetings with farmers this fall.

Will Aid Fire Victims.

Farmers will be encouraged to plant "soil conserving" crops, but in so doing they might cut acreage other than corn and wheat, and still conform to the program, and draw benefits, he pointed out.

Meanwhile, statistical price repercussions from drought ravage of food crops was apparent in sharp advances of wholesale prices of farm products and foods reported yesterday by the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics. The all-commodity index increased 1 per cent during the week ended August 8.

This advance brought the composite index of wholesale prices to 81.1 per cent of the 1926 average," Commissioner Isador Lubin reported. "The index now stands at the highest point reached since November 1930, when it was 81.3."

As raging forest fires added to the woes of Minnesota and Wisconsin farmers, the Works Progress Administration yesterday authorized "immediate" employment of fire victims on regular WPA projects. It was estimated that 2,000,000 acres already have been destroyed in the Lake Superior area.

Waiving usual certification red tape, persons known to have lost their homes or crops will be put to work helping the WPA firefighters already on the job. Regular WPA operations have been stopped in the fire zone, and all available man power assigned to fight the blaze.

The WPA said 61,000 farmers were employed on various drought projects yesterday, and said 75,000 would be at work by Monday.

Insects Are Active.

On top of the unprecedented drought devastation, and the Lake Superior fire havoc, the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine reported unusual midsummer activity of insects following in the train of the drought. Grasshoppers and chinch bugs were said to be "cleaning up many fields of grain and forage crops that survived the drought."

The Weather Bureau offered little hope for a break in the drought. Showers in three of the afflicted States failed to do more than settle the dust. Rainfall maps published by the Agriculture Department showed that half of the United States still is extremely dry, and the weather has been "abnormally hot nearly everywhere."

Associated Press dispatches from Topeka, Kans., yesterday quoted Senator Arthur Capper, warm supporter of Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas, as saying he is "working on a crop insurance bill which I intend to lay before the Senate Agriculture Committee as soon as Congress meets."

"A sound system of crop insurance sponsored by the farmer contributing a reasonable amount for maintenance of an insurance fund will not only protect the farmers in years of drought and other calamities, but will also, along with good programs of land utilization, help to iron out the peaks and valleys of high and low prices for farm products," Capper said.

Russian Fliers Take Off On Leg of Moscow Hop

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 13 (AP).—Sigismund Levanevsky and Victor Levchenko, Russian fliers en route from San Pedro, Calif., to Moscow, took off from Harding Lake for Nome at 11:27 a. m. (4:27 p. m. E. S. T.) today.

The ground temperature here was 68 degrees and 55 to 60 elsewhere on their route, with flying weather reported excellent. Mayor E. B. Collins and a large delegation of citizens accompanied the fliers to the lake, a summer resort 50 miles from here, to bid them Godspeed.

Mary Astor Wins Suit, Revives Marital Feud

MARY ASTOR.

Actress Gains Custody of Marylyn, 4, Nine Months a Year, Then Issues Attack on Husband, Who Charges "Raw Deal;" Diary Is Sealed.

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 13.—Mary Astor, red-haired film mother, won back her child tonight—but she couldn't forget she was a woman and had to get in the last word.

As a result, the film colony's bitterest legal feud in a decade, safely settled in court by a signed agreement between the actress and her one-time husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, wound up in a blaze of extra-legal name-calling and recriminations which threatened for a time to re-open the whole case.

Judge Goodwin Knight, who almost single handed forced peace in the controversy, mounted the bench at 4 p. m., and read a decision awarding custody of 4-year-old Marylyn Thorpe nine months of the year to the actress, and the rest of the time to Dr. Thorpe.

And—highly important to the film world which squirmed for three weeks under its threatening revelations—he sealed the actress' diary in the archives of the court.

She referred to the volume in which the actress penned in lavender ink secrets of film-colony romances, part of which Dr. Thorpe's lawyers gave to newspapers without going through the formality of entering it into evidence.

Recapitulating, Miss Astor said:

"In order to liberate me and my daughter from this complete bondage (Dr. Thorpe's legal custody of the girl) and from being at the mercy of Dr. Thorpe * * * and

Union Gets 'Walk' Threat By Coughlin

Priest Will Quit Social Group if It Doesn't Ban Alliances.

Favors Lemke Support, but Not Party Headed by Representative.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 13.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin charted today a course clear of political entanglements for his National Union for Social Justice, opening its first national convention here tomorrow.

"I'll step out," said the Royal Oak (Mich.) priest, "if the union does not retain its own identity. There is absolutely no chance for an alliance with other groups."

He said a resolution would be offered to indorse Representative Lemke, of North Dakota, the Union Party's candidate for President, but that it would carry no indorsement of the Union Party.

Lemke is scheduled to address the delegates Sunday afternoon.

Father Coughlin said he would not make a stumping tour with Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, aid of the late Huey P. Long, or Lemke in behalf of Lemke's candidacy.

Joint Tour Rejected.

"It was anticipated at the time of the Townsend convention (held in Cleveland a month ago) that we would all stump jointly in the campaign for Congressman Lemke," Father Coughlin said at a press conference.

"But when I returned home and found the speaking arranged for me, I found that such a joint campaign would be impossible."

He added that he would make several joint appearances with Lemke and his running mate, Thomas C. O'Brien, of Boston.

A disagreement over whether delegates should hear Dr. Townsend, founder of the old-age pension movement bearing his name, was settled by Father Coughlin upon his arrival by boat from Detroit. Coughlin announced Townsend and other "outside" speakers would appear Saturday after conclusion of the business sessions.

Walter D. Davis, convention marshall, had led opposition to the appearance of Townsend, saying:

"This is not an open forum. Father Coughlin was invited to address the Towsend convention, but that is no reason why we should invite everyone to speak at our convention."

Call Visit Honest.

Father Coughlin said he considered President Roosevelt's appearance in Cleveland tomorrow, which will coincide with the opening of the Coughlin convention, "an absolutely honest visit."

"It will make no difference to the convention that the President is visiting here," Coughlin added.

The program laid down by Father Coughlin for his union contains these four points:

"1. That the National Union for Social Justice retain its own identity.

"2. That it stand by his 16 principles of social justice.

"3. That it refrain from amalgamation with any other organization.

"4. That it adopt no political party as its Godchild."

Of the Townsend $200-a-month pension plan, Father Coughlin said he believed it "absolutely impossible" of accomplishment "until the Federal Reserve bank system is nationalized."

Referring to an open letter he addressed to delegates in his weekly publication, Social Justice, Coughlin said he intended it to be "metaphorical." He wrote in the letter:

"If one out of 12 apostles were a Judas Iscariot, it is an even bet that one out of 1,200 delegates to the national convention will be a Gomer Smith."

Hitler Textbook Urged.

Paris, Aug. 13 (AP).—The Communist party asked the government tonight to make Reichschancellor Adolf Hitler's autobiography "My Struggle," a textbook in all French schools. The purpose, it said, "is so the French will know in what contempt Hitler holds our country and what his designs are regarding it."

White House Parley Hints Cut in Taxes

Jump in Revenue Brings Survey by New Deal Looking to Slash.

By Felix Bruner.

A new promise that Federal taxes will not be increased and a hint that some levies may be reduced or eliminated came from the White House yesterday.

The announcement followed a conference called by President Roosevelt and attended by Secretary Morgenthau, Senator Harrison, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Representative Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. The promise was in the form of oral statements by Harrison and Doughton and a letter written by Morgenthau and addressed to the President.

The promise of no new taxes came just a week before Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, plans to begin his campaign tour, during which it is expected that he will stress Government spending and taxation. No explanation was given for the hurried manner in which the Congressional leaders were called to Washington, and this remained a mystery, inasmuch as nothing tangible can be done about taxes until Congress convenes and the date for the opening of Congress is five months in the future.

The statements, obviously intended to be reassuring to business, were made only a few days before the anniversary of the President's promise of a "breathing spell" for business. They followed almost the same lines of a similar promise of no new taxes made by the President on September 30, 1935, a promise which was followed by enactment by Congress of a bill providing new taxes.

Revenues Increase.

Improved business conditions and increasing Federal revenues were given as the reason it is felt new taxes will not be necessary. Federal revenues for the first 41 days of the present fiscal year have averaged about $1,000,000 a day higher than those of the same period last year.

Morgenthau expressed the opinion that revenues are steadily approaching a yield which will be adequate not only to pay the expenses of the Government but would make possible some reduction in the public debt. The Secretary of the Treasury indicated the taxes most likely to be eliminated will be included in the long list of so-called nuisance taxes. He said, however, that the Treasury would make no specific recommendations, but would supply facts upon which Congress could act.

Co-operating with the Treasury, tax experts of the Congressional committees will begin immediately a study of the situation in preparation for legislatoin. It was indicated by Morgenthau that inequities and unnecessary administrative difficulties will be eliminated and that taxes "that create unfairness to consumers or to trade or have other disadvantages which outweigh their revenue yield" will be modified.

President Roosevelt conferred with his tax experts for about an hour, after which he immediately departed on his flood inspection tour and visit to Cleveland and to Chautauqua, N. Y. He made no comment on the tax program.

Treasury Studies Cited.

Morgenthau said in his letter to the President:

"At your request the Treasury Department since the adjournment of Congress has been giving careful attention to the adequacy of the tax structure to meet revenue needs of the Government and generally to the desirability of additional tax legislation.

"We have reached the conclusion that no new taxes and no increases in present tax rates are necessary. Due to continued improvement in business conditions, the yield of existing taxes is steadily increasing. Total revenues from sources other than the outlawed processing taxes in the fiscal year 1936 were substantially higher even than our estimates of last January. In addition, the tax structure was strengthened

Hostages Will Be Slain If Vessel Shells City, Loyalists Warn Rebels

Tells 4,000 at Altoona He Is Seeking 'First Hand View' of Damaged Section; Civic Leaders Prepare Data on Control Plans.

By the Associated Press.

Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 13.—Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania, after a conference with President Roosevelt tonight, announced Presidential approval of allotments totaling $2,961,000 for preliminary flood-control projects in western Pennsylvania.

Earlier President Roosevelt promised Johnstown citizens the Federal Government would co-operate to the utmost to prevent recurrence of floods which poured through the city last March.

Leaving his special train for the first time on his personal tour of flood areas in Pennsylvania and New York, the Chief Executive rode through the downtown section of the cty, where flood waters caused damage estimated at $28,000,000 last St. Patrick's Day.

Crowds lined the route to the city limits as the President was whisked 15 miles to the site of a proposed dam on Stony Creek, which Army engineers assert would help remove the menace of floods from Johnstown.

A large crowd in a natural ampitheater on the outskirts of the city heard Mayor Daniel J. Shields introduce the President on his return from the motor trip and cheered the Executive's pledge of Federal co-operation in the fight against future floods.

Referring to floods of last March, the President said:

"We want to keep you from facing those dangers again, and the Federal Government, so long as I have anything to do with it, is going to co-operate with your communities and your state to do everything possible to prevent floods."

Praising the attitude of Johnstown's citizens in the spring flood emergency, the President said they had "shown the finest qualities of good American courage."

Accompanying Mr. Roosevelt in his car were Gov. George H. Earle, of Pennsylvania, who joined the party at Johnstown, and Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of Army Engineers.

At the site of the proposed earth dam on Stony Creek River, details of the project were explained to the President by Col. W. E. R. Covell, United States District Engineer at Pittsburgh.

From Johnstown, the President plans to go to Cleveland to the Great Lakes Exposition, then swing back into Pennsylvania and New York State for a further survey of flood regions.

Ultimatum Is Served on Ship Anchored Off San Sebastian.

Irun Bombarded; Citizens in Panic

German, Italian Airmen Aid Insurgents' Drive for Malaga.

By the Associated Press.

Irun, Spain, Aug. 13.—Rebel bombardment of San Sebastian by air today led to a government threat to kill 700 rebel hostages if the city is shelled from the sea.

An aerial attack of five planes, which dropped nearly 100 bombs, left the inhabitants of San Sebastian and Irun in panic, it was reported.

The ultimatum threatening the hostages was served upon the rebel cruiser Almirante Cervera anchored outside the harbor, its 8-inch guns trained on the city.

700 Held on Ship.

Officers of the British destroyer Comet said the government at Santander had converted a freighter into a prison ship and held 700 Fascist rebels.

The loyalist leaders notified the commander of the Almirante Cervera that the entire shipload of hostages would be killed if San Sebastian were shelled.

The rebel bombing planes had wrought heavy damage on the seaport city, which earlier had repulsed an infantry onslaught.

The main boulevard, the one-time vacation residence of Alfonso of Spain, and the airport were struck. Santa Maria Church and Oviedo street were damaged.

Two miles offshore the Almirante Cervera awaited a signal for attack, and the reinforced infantry gathered at nearby Tolosa for another attempt to capture the city.

Irun Is Bombed.

In the new advance, insurgent troops were fighting their way through the hills which they fled yesterday. Loyalist snipers slowed the march.

Villabona was taken yesterday with almost no resistance, but today rebel scouting forces found the hills on both sides of the highway to San Sebastian occupied by fast-moving squads of government militia.

Lieut. Col. Cayuela led forces advancing on Andoain in the San Sebastian-Irun sector, and nearly 3,000 reinforcements sped through Tolosa.

From Burgos came reports by rebel officers that loyalist resistance at Bilbao, also in the Bay of Biscay sector, was cracking under bitter artillery fire and that surrender of the city was expected soon.

350 Loyalists Slain.

Gibraltar, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—More than 350 government troops were slain, scores wounded and 150 captured tonight at Guadiaro in a fierce battle with rebel forces marching on Malaga, loyalist naval base in southern Spain.

Rebel losses were said to be small. One officer and an Arab were known dead and 16 wounded.

The battle occurred on the Guadiaro road to Malaga when rebel forces from La Linea attacked a loyalist column 3,000 strong.

Seven loyalist leaders were taken back to La Linea and killed by firing squads in the public square.

German and Italian aviators, flying a crack fleet of bombers and fighting planes, provided the spearhead of the rebel advance from Seville against the government naval base at Malaga and paved the way for a southern attack on Madrid.

It was widely reported at Seville that the insurgents have more than 100 of the most modern Caproni, Savoia, Junkers and Henkel scouting and bombing planes.

The loyalists battleship Jaime Primero, which last week bombarded and set the rebel stronghold of Algeciras aflame and which has gravely endangered transport of insurgent Moorish troops from Spanish Morocco, was bombed and sunk by a fleet of rebel airplanes in Malaga Harbor, the insurgent radio station at Seville reported.

Radio Seville also announced that Gen. Emilio Mola, southern insurgent commander, had arrived at

Jews of World Vote to Boycott Nazi Products

Congress at Geneva Moves to Combat Anti-Semitic Propaganda Wave.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Aug. 13.—The World Jewish Congress approved today a boycott of the products of Nazi Germany and a series of other measures aimed to alleviate suffering among Jews.

Charging that Nazi propaganda is spreading anti-Semitism throughout the world, the Congress voted to urge League of Nations intervention.

Another resolution appealed to all governments to modify their immigration restrictions to aid Jewish refugees.

Presented by Louis Segal, of New York, secretary of the Jewish National Workers Alliance of America, the resolution suggested negotiations with the governments and the League of Nations to remove restrictions on Jewish immigration. It proposed formation of a commission to study establishment of a bank to aid emigres.

Drawn by Rabbi Israel.

The resolution against anti-Semitic propaganda, prepared by a committee under Rabbi Edward Israel, of Baltimore, was presented by Prof. Horace M. Kallen, of the New School of Social Research, New York.

It proposed: Establishment of a co-ordinating bureau for counter-propaganda; creation of a press bureau to supply material; legal action against anti-Semitic libels; popularization of studies exposing "baseless defamations," and a program of general enlightenment of the Jewish question.

Dr. Georg Bernhard, former German editor, criticized Jewish efforts to aid refugees from Germany. He said they have been disorganized and hampered by fear.

"Wrong policies of Jewish organizations," Dr. Bernhard declared, "are responsible for the plight of more than 75,000 refugees who are not yet permanently settled, who are insecure and not working."

Worker Equity InCorporations Urged by Knox

'Real Share - the - Wealth Program' Espoused in W. Va. Speech.

Text of Col. Knox's Address—Page 6.

By the Associated Press.

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 13.—Col. Frank Knox, Republican nominee for Vice President, told West Virginia Republicans tonight he seeks in the future "a real share-the-wealth development in this land."

He spoke before the Mountain State's Republican convention, called to nominate candidates for the Supreme Court bench, and draft a campaign platform.

The Vice Presidential candidate said the "share-the-wealth" program he hopes to see carried out consists of greater ownership of corporation shares by workmen.

He explained, in an address prepared for delivery:

"Three-Year Vaudeville."

"In our American society there should be no antagonism between the worker and the stockholder. Our capitalist system rests on the corporation, large and small. This capitalist system has grave defects. There are inequalities in it. But it has built the greatest productivity in the history of all mankind. It has given the American worker the highest wages in all history. The man who would tear down this marvelous system when there is no equally productive system to replace it is an enemy of his country. I want to see our economic system purged of its injustices. I want to see it preserved for its benefits. * * *

"I want to see in the future a real share-the-wealth development in this land.

"I want to see an increasing share in the profits of this system going to the workers. I want to see this come about, not by any suicidal scheme of destruction, but by an extension of the ownership of corporation shares by the workers. Unseen and unnoticed, this process has been going on a long time. There are 12,000,000 owners of corporate shares in this country today. War and depression have temporarily set back this great movement. It will begin again. In this movement lies the prospect of a genuine share-the-wealth program. In it there is the prospect of industrial peace in this country."

Assails Expenditures.

The Chicago publisher also attacked the present Administration as "too expensive a luxury to continue four more years," saying:

"This Administration embarked on a series of blind, reckless and cruelly expensive experiments on the vital institutions of American economic life. It inaugurated a policy of blind expenditure of the people's money. It established policies that undermined credit and currency. It forced experiments that harried business and restricted production. It began at once to create an enormous Federal bureaucracy, the largest in any government in the history of the world."

He referred to "three years of continuous economic vaudeville," saying "it has been a grand show.

"But the people have grown tired of it. There are not enough breathing spells between the acts. It costs too much. The people have grown nervous, watching the glittering balls juggled in midair. Too many have been broken. Even the Democrats are walking out on the show."

Court Denies Plea To Parole 2 Jailed For False Alarms

A plea from Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of penal institutions, to place on probation two youths recently given sentences for turning in false fire alarms was rejected yesterday by Judge Robert E. Mattingly.

The boys are Harry L. Smith, 18, and Joseph N. Bresnahan, 17, whom Judge Mattingly sentenced in Police Court July 30 for terms of 330 days each.

Capt. Barnard gave overcrowded conditions at the Occoquan Workhouse, where Bresnahan is serving his sentence, as reason for the probation plea. He said the workhouse now has 1,100 "worthless prisoners and only half enough guards to look after them."

Judge Mattingly replied he could see no reason for giving Smith and Bresnahan different treatment than had been administered to similar offenders.

"I have sent every man who has been brought before me in the past 16 years on similar charges to the jail," said the judge. "The boys' only reason for this outlandish act was 'for the fun of it.'"

LegionParades; Future Veteran Groups Booed

'Know Not What They Do,' Col. Johnson Declares as Session Opens Here.

The "boys" of 1917-18, middle-aged men now with thinning hair under their jaunty overseas caps, marched up Pennsylvania avenue again last night in the American Legion parade.

The terminus of the parade was the Mayflower Hotel ballroom, where the veterans opened their three-day annual convention, eighteenth in the history of the District department.

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, of South Carolina, a Rainbow Division officer in France, now Assistant Secretary of Commerce, precipitated some "boos" when he mentioned the Veterans of Future Wars, the Prnceton students who asked their bonus in advance.

"Know Not What They Do."

It was regarded as nothing more than a prank, Col. Johnson said, until the college girls organized the Future Gold Star Mothers. That, he said, aroused the indignation of all America, and probably headed off the organization of the "Future Unknown Soldiers."

"We have not abused or reviled those boys," he added. "Our prayer is, God forgive them; they know not what they do. We fought for their existence that they might avoid future wars. If you look at the map of Europe now, you will see danger signs. Should the Veterans of Future Wars ever be called, we hope that they will have more experience and better equipment than we had. And we hope they will hold to the same high principles we have held since 1917."

Mercury Hits 94; No Relief in Sight

The heat wave which moved into the Capital Wednesday, the Weather Man says, will continue through today at least. The thermometer reached a high of 94 yesterday and the humidity climbed to a new mark.

No rain relief is in sight, the Weather Man said. The skies will be tinged with traces of clouds throughout the day, but there will be no showers.

The mercury climbed 23 degrees yesterday. Low for the day was 71 at 5:30 a. m.

Edtrell Myrica, colored, 28, of 421 Q street northwest, was prostrated by the heat while in a lunchroom in the 1200 block Seventh street northwest. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

How long the wave will last, the Weather Man said he did not know.

'36 General Tax In Kansas 1.29; Is 10-Year Low

Landon Estimates Yield at $3,276,425; Spends Day With Family.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 13.—The Kansas State Tax Commission announced today a State general tax levy for 1936 of 1.29 mills, saying "this is the lowest levy and the lowest amount to be raised by ad valorem taxes, for State purposes, in any year for more than a decade."

In a formal statement the commission, appointed by Gov. Alf M. Landon, said the levy would produce $3,276,425.88.

The rate compared with 1.30 mills in 1934 and 1.44 mills in 1935.

Setting the general levy "to meet appropriations made by the Legislature, including those made for all current expenses," the commission also fixed a levy of 0.73 mills for payment of the State soldiers' bonus bonds.

Estes Park, Colo., Aug. 13 (AP).—Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Republican Presidential nominee, vacationing before he starts his Eastern campaign tour, spent most of today reading and visiting with his family.

He is recoving from a cold. On advice of his physician he plans to remain inactive until he recovers his full strength.

On his arrival yesterday from Topeka, Kans., he told newspapermen he had virtually overcome the cold.

His aids said there would be no callers this week.

Minnesota Border Settlers Flee Forest Fires; Roads to Region Closed; 10,000 Acres Burned

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Aug. 13.—Evacuation of several northern Minnesota border settlers before an advancing Canadian forest fire came simultaneously tonight with a State command ordering sheriffs of nine counties to close all secondary roads to regular traffic.

Ranger Dick Willem, of Warroad, Minn., notified the State forestry department that settlers north of the village, in the path of a major Canadian blaze, fled their homes down a narrow road that provides the sole access to the region.

Grover Conzet, State forester, telegraphed sheriffs of nine northern counties advising them to "post guards closing all side or secondary roads to trafic where these roads lead into large or threatening forest fires."

Simultaneously rangers announced roads in the Beltrami Island State forest, between Warroad and Baudette, were closed to regular travel. Smoke in the area has obscured vision, and sightseekers are interfering with fire-control operations.

A radiogram informed the State Department of Forestry tonight that the Kabetogama Lake blaze, 40 miles west of International Falls, had "torn away loose" from the 400 men stationed there.

The rampaging fire, with an estimated 10,000 acres leveled, had covered from 3 to 4 miles, officials estimated.

Conzet's telegram was to sheriffs of St. Louis, Pine, Carlton, Aitkin, Itasca, Koochiching, Lake of the Woods and Roseau counties.

Red flames of destruction completely out of hand, according to word to the State conservation commission, licked thousands of acres of Minnesota brush and timberland as settlers in two areas were warned to retreat before onrushing conflagrations.

"The situation is entirely subject to acts of God," said Conzet.

He promptly was given unlimited power to protect life and property in the State by the commission after settlers in the McGrath, Minn., vicinity were cautioned by National Guardsmen to evacuate the territory.

A second evacuation order was issued to settlers by Ranger Dick Williams north of Warroad, where a Canadian fire threatened to leap the border. Meanwhile, three men were arrested at International Falls. They were accused of violating fire regulations.

Two hundred military trucks are available to evacuate settlers in the north, officials said.

Administration Curbs Liberty, Hoover Asserts

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Aug. 13.—Herbert Hoover termed the Republican presidential campaign a fight to "turn destructive change into constructive progress," and National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton described Washington "royal economists" as enemies of America in addresses prepared for a campaign rally here tonight.

The former President, who introduced Hamilton, said "tireless effort and unity of action" was necessary to elect Republican candidates in a campaign which has become "a debate of the fundamentals in government—the greatest in three generations."

The charge that liberty has been violated by the Administration was made by Hoover.

"We have seen the rise of personal government," he said. "We have seen the growth of a swarming bureaucracy. We have seen Congress reduced from proud independence to a flock of 'must' sheep. We have seen the Constitution violated a dozen times."

He said the true American liberalism had been "the common possession of both great parties until this temporary seizure of the Democratic Party by the New Deal."

Cannot Change Spots.

No recantations of the New Deal, Hoover declared, can erase its record.

"The leopard cannot change his spots even when he runs for office," said the former President.

"It is not to defeat the change which a growing civilization requires that we oppose the New Deal. It is to turn destructive change into constructive progress."

Mr. Hoover declared the Administration has pictured itself as "the true working of pure American ideals."

"I offer Mr. Farley as Exhibit A of this new idealism," he commented.

Praises Hamilton.

He said Hamilton already has demonstrated his abilities "in this great ask" of organizing the Republican campaign.

Hamilton's address climaxed a busy day. After a breakfast rally, he journeyed to Palo Alto for a conference with Hoover, addressed a luncheon rally in Oakland, and in the afternoon met with northern California party leaders.

He said he discussed campaign tactics and issues with Hoover, but that the part Hoover may play in the campaign was not considered.

Swift Withdraws From Stock Yards

Chicago, Aug. 13 (AP).—Following approval in Washington today by United States District Court of Swift & Co.'s application for transfer of its holdings in various stock yards companies to the newly organized United Stockyards Corporation, the packing firm disclosed here $7,323,470 is involved in the transaction.

O. F. Swift, president of the packing firm, said "the sale of our interests in the stock yards in no way affects our present method of doing business, nor our contracts with our customers."

Sale of the interests was made necessary by terms of the so-called consent decree entered in 1920.

An order approving the sale of six stockyards by Swift & Co., packers, to United Stockyards Corporation of Chicago was signed yesterday by Justice Jennings Bailey of Federal District Court.

Six Children Too Many.

Pittsfield, Mass., Aug. 13 (AP).—Louis D'Alessandro won a divorce today after he related that soon after his marriage in 1934, he arrived home for dinner one night and found six children, ranging in age from 3 to 17 years, sitting at the table. His wife's progeny by a previous marriage was news to him, he said, and when he protested, his wife "pushed him around." His divorce was awarded on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

Regatta Planned.

Irvington, Va., Aug. 13.—Dr. Lee S. Liggan, president of the Irvington Improvement Association, announced that a yachting regatta will be held at Irvington, on the Rappahannock River, in Lancaster County, Saturday, August 22, by the newly organized Rappahanock River Yacht Club.

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—A new campaign organization, known as the Progressive Republican Committee for Franklin D. Roosevelt, opened headquarters here today.

The organization is headed by Roscoe S. Conklin, New York attorney and cousin of the late United States Senator of the same name. Mrs. Helen Walker Homan, author and grand-niece of James G. Blaine, Republican leader of the same era, is vice chairman and treasurer.

The leaders said they hoped to have Republican organizations set up in every State within a month to work for the re-election of President Roosevelt.

Boston, Aug. 13 (AP).—Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston today announced his withdrawal from the race for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

The mayor said he favored the candidacy of either Lieut. Gov. Joseph L. Hurley or Mayor Robert E. Greenwood, mayor of Fitchburg and son-in-law of United States Senator Marcus A. Coolidge. Senator Coolidge did not file for re-election.

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—George A. Nelson, Socialist candidate for the Vice Presidency, today estimated his party would poll about 3,000,000 votes in the Presidential election.

"The organized farmers, to a large degree," he asserted, "feel they are through with both branches of the capitalistic party—generally termed the Democrats and Republicans."

Although he said this feeling maintains, the 63-year-old candidate did not claim the Socialist Party would carry any States. He added to this negative comment, "However, it's mighty hard to tell what might happen between now and November."

The Republican National Committee said in a statement yesterday the immigration service "appears to be violating the conditions which the Department of Labor forces private industry to comply with."

"Under an order dated June 13, 1936," the statement said, "basic hours of labor were increased from 7 to 8 hours a day, from a 39-hour week to a 44-hour week."

The affected employes were said to have protested to Secretary Perkins, in a letter reading in part:

"Only recently the Federal Government withdrew contracts from, and no longer gives contracts to, firms in outside industry which require their employes to work more than 40 hours a week."

"This letter met an evasive reply," the statement said.

St. Louis, Aug. 13 (AP).—The national "Jeffersonian Democrats" opened central headquarters in the Railway Exchange Building here today and National Secretary Sterling E. Edmunds, St. Louis attorney, announced organization of an anti-Roosevelt campaign would begin immediately.

Dr. Gleason L. Archer, president of the liberal arts and journalism schools and dean of the law school at Suffolk College, Boston, is to begin formulation of radio and speakers' schedule. Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, of the Philadelphia Municipal Court, and Attorney Robert S. Bright, of Frederick, Md., were to come here next week as assistants to National Chairman James A. Reed, former Democratic Senator from Missouri.

The organization was formed at a recent conference of anti-Roosevelt leaders in Detroit.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Miami, Fla., Aug. 13.—Fred Kane, 45, stove repairman and second-hand dealer, was found dead in his shop here this morning, his head crushed from several blows.

Police are holding Jerry C. Fernald, husky 28-year-old truck-driver, who formerly rented rooms above Kane's store. Kane admits visiting the scene last night and also admits having quarrelled with Kane about rent.

Kane came here 11 years ago from Washingtin, where he is said to have operated a tearoom and have been a dancing instructor. He has been separated for several years from his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Kane. She lives at 755 Newton place northwest, Washington.

C. I. O. Favored By Roosevelt, G.O.P. Aid Says

Vote for President Helps Rebels, Party's Labor Chief Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—William Hutcheson, director of the labor division of the Republican campaign, asserted today that President Roosevelt definitely favors the John L. Lewis group in the American Federation of Labor controversy.

He said the vertical type of union, advocated by Lewis and the Committee for Industrial Organization, had little or no backing before the beginning of the Roosevelt Administration.

"A vote for Roosevelt is virtually a vote for the C. I. O.," he said. "I think Roosevelt will lose a large number of votes when his stand is generally known."

Ask $1 Donations.

The United Mine Workers' executive board today asked each local union to request "individual voluntary contributions" of $1 or more each from all members for use in the campaign to re-elect President Roosevelt.

The union claims upward of 500,000 members.

Hutcheson announced the appointment of Charles Grady, of Newark, N. J., secretary of the Printing Pressmen's Union, as head of the labor division in the East.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., manager of the Republican campaign in the East, announced appointment of Roger W. Straus, of New York, as his special assistant.

A short time later Miss Natalie Couch, director of the women's division, announced that Mrs. Roger W. Straus had accepted an appointment as head of the motor corps, which will distribute campaign literature and carry speakers through the 17 States in the Eastern division.

Clergy Encourage Kentucky Woman To Turn Hangman

By the Associated Press.

Owensboro, Ky., Aug. 13.—The crowd that will gather to see Rainey Bethea hanged at sunrise tomorrow may not know until the hangman grasps the gallows trigger whether plump, middle-aged Sheriff Florence Thompson will put the 22 year-old colored ravisher to death.

Mrs. Thompson, as Daviess County's chief peace officer, is charged by Kentucky law with responsibility for executing the death sentence. She has received hundreds of letters, telegrams and telephone calls. Some said a woman should not perform such a duty. Others urged that a woman should perform her duty.

She revealed today she had consulted her priest—she is a Catholic—and also had consulted several Protestant ministers. All the clergymen, she declared, had assured her the death sentence in this case was sanctioned by the laws of God and man.

Bethea was accused of assaulting, robbing and murdering 70-year-old Mrs. Elza Edwards, a well-to-do widow a month ago. He was indicted, tried and convicted on the assault charge. Kentucky law provides hanging in the county where the crime occurred in rape cases.

Pet Robin, Jay Sent Into Park To Make Own Way in World

Two Women Decide it Best That Feathered Friends Be Reared in Own Surroundings; in Outdoor Birdland.

After being hand-fed for a month on hamburger "worms" and basking in the luxury of Mrs. Russell Bennett's apartment at 1302 Eighteenth street northwest, a 5-weeks-old robin yesterday began to make his own way in the world.

With considerable misgiving, Mrs. Bennett turned him loose in the secluded section of Rock Creek Park. In less than an hour he was as much at home beneath the open sky and among the trees as if he had spent his formative days there instead of among thick rugs and shaded lamps, with five regular meals a day.

A companion on the maiden flight was a pet bluejay Mrs. D. H. Mugridge, of 201 Second street northwest, had reared in her apartment. When she heard of Mrs. Bennett and the robin she called and asked if she might turn her bird loose at the same time.

"We thought we could give each other moral support for the ordeal," explained Mrs. Bennett.

"I had been getting up at 5 o'clock every morning to give my baby (the robin) his first meal, and I knew I couldn't keep that up forever. Besides I realized he probably would be better off among other birds, leading a bird's life. But that didn't make the parting any easier."

The two women never had met, and so, when Mrs. Bennett, accompanied by a maid and carrying the robin in a cage at the appointed place in the park, she began looking for Mrs. Mugridge.

"I asked all the people I met if they'd seen another woman with a bird cage," she explained after she was back in her apartment. "I know they thought I was crazy. They didn't even try to hide it."

Eventually Mrs. Mugidge showed up, and, after a conference, they decided the bluejay, named Corn Plaster, should go first. He was several weeks older than the robin and seemed to have more assurance.

After he had soared to the top of a tree the robin tried his wings. Mrs. Bennett called encouragement to him and he answered for a few minutes from his parking place on a leafy branch. Then a little sparrow came to rest beside him. They immediately began a conversation with the sparrow doing most of the talking. While Mrs. Bennett watched the two birds began to hunt for worms and bugs.

"I felt a little silly then, remembering how many times I had got up at 5 a. m. to give him handmade hamburger worms," she admitted.

World Peace Plea Made to Roosevelt

London, Aug. 13 (AP).—George Lansbury, veteran British labor leader and member of Parliament, appealed tonight to "the President and people of the United States" to save the world from possible war by calling a peace conference.

Speaking before the International Reform Federation of Washington and London, he said:

"From somewhere in the world there must come a call if mankind is to be saved. * * *

"Britain has ever done her share and more than her share of exploiting and developing great portions of the world for her own national glory. Thus Great Britain could not be considered as quite disinterested.

"So I turn to the President and people of the United States."

Lansbury said he was of the opinion Britain would willingly agree that international commissions could safeguard such interests as the Straits of Gibraltar, the Suez Canal, the Persian Gulf, the Red Sea and international airports and air routes.

2 Children Hurt By Envoy's Car In Georgetown

Quick Action of Woman Saves One From Death; Carriage Crushed.

Two small Georgetown children were injured slightly yesterday when a jammed steering gear caused a car driven by Oswaldo Aranha, Ambassador from Brazil, to plunge over the curb to the sidewalk in front of 1207 Thirty-fourth street northwest, where the children were playing.

The children, Nancy Lee Lowe, 3, and Catherine Rest, 12, both of 1217 Thirty-fourth street northwest, were treated at Georgetown Hospital for severe bruises. They were later released.

The Lowe child, sitting in her baby carriage, escaped possible serious injury or death through the quick action of Mrs. Rose Williams, who was sitting on the steps above the sidewalk. Mrs. Williams snatched the child to safety a few seconds before the baby carriage was crushed under the wheels of the machine.

Other children who had been playing in the group were Rose Marie Rest, 10, and Rose Reeves, 14, of 1211 Thirty-fourth street. They ran to safety when they saw the car approach.

The accident occurred as Ambassador Aranha attempted to start his car after jamming it against a tree at Thirty-fourth and M streets northwest. He had struck the tree in making a turn from M street into Thirty-fourth.

Commenting on the accident at the Embassy chancery yesterday afternoon, the Ambassador said, "I thought I would leave the car there and have it sent for. I got out and was about to leave when a man told me it wasn't damaged. So I got back in and started off in first gear."

Aranha said his car shot rapidly across the street and, before he could stop it, had scattered the group of children. The fender had jammed against the front wheel, he said, making it impossible for him to steer.

The Ambassador said he had been through several revolutions and had been wounded twice in battle, but the experience yesterday was the most unpleasant he had ever had.

When police arrived the Brazilian envoy told them he wanted to be treated "exactly like an American citizen."

Police Under Par In Target Practice

The report showed that during the four-month period 1,288 policemen practiced at the targets. Only 62 per cent qualified with an average of more than 50. This, in the opinion of Lieut. John E. Goodsell, who was in charge of the range, is a poor showing.

Policeman Eugene E. Ditta, of the Seventh Precinct, took the prize offered by the Joseph Schwartz Jewelry Co. with the high average of 91 per cent bullseyes. He received the classification of expert for registering a mark of more than 89.

The expert class was reached by 155, with top honors going to the traffic division, which had more qualifiers than any other precinct or bureau.

The next class—those getting an average of 79 to 89 per cent and termed sharpshooters—showed 226 who qualified. The marksmanship rating of 60 to 79 was given to 418 of the men.

organizing Sons of the American Legion for the Society of Forty and Eight, warned the convention of Communistic activities here

Hines Cites Prudence.

"I am not a fanatic on this matter," he said. "I am not forever seeing Reds behind chairs, but we have a situation here which cannot be ignored."

He said a local Communst organization has its headquarters in an F street bookshop, and that there it recruits young Washingtonians, teaches them to ignore the flag and teaches them to sing the Internationale.

"They call themselves the Young Pioneers of America," Fraser said, "and they seek to recruit 50,000 boys. Recruit them for what? To the cause of hatred of all things American."

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, told the convention that predictions that the bonus would be squandered had not been fulfilled.

"From all indications," he said, "the veterans have exercised great prudence, and this has been a great disappointment to those who were scheming to get their money."

Announcement of the award of eight trophies was made by Maj. Paul J. McGahan, past department commander. The winners were:

Kate A. M. Claggett Americanism trophy, offered by U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post; awarded to Fort Stevens Post.

Kate K. Briggs community service trophy, offered by Past Department Vice Commander Briggs, awarded to U. S. Jacob Jones Post.

Peckham trophy, offered by Past Department Commander Frank L. Peckham for post having largest membership, awarded to Sergt. Jasper Post, which has 682 members, 48 more than the Vincent B. Costello Post.

Early Enrollment Trophies.

Trophy offered on similar basis for smaller posts by Past Department Commander Julius I. Peyser, awarded Department of Agriculture Post.

Paul J. McGahan trophy for membership growth over four-year period, awarded to Kenneth H. Nash Post.

Quentin Roosevelt Post trophy, for unit showing greatest increase over its membership ten days before previous convention; awarded James E. Walker Post.

The legion parade started from Fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue. From there to the Mayflower Hotel is quite a hike. Old warriors like Bill Franklin and Tommy Murray were puffing a bit at the end, but there was no report of any former doughboy falling out of line.

The battle for department commander this year appears to be between Lieut. Horace Lineberg, of the Metropolitan Police Department, and John H. O'Connell, of the Postal Railway Mail Service. Joseph J. Malloy, the retiring department commander, will be nominated for the post of national executive committee. His prospective opponent is another past department commander, James O'Connor Roberts.

Police Shift 30 Cars From Parade's Route

More than 30 automobiles were moved by the Police Department's special cranes during the legion parade last night.

Police spotted cars parked along the line of march or otherwise in violation of the regulations, and moved them to other places. When the owners reported their automobiles missing, the police checked the records and told them where to find the vehicles.

Child Regained By Mary Astor; Clash Revived

Attack on Husband May Reopen Case; Diary Will Be Sealed.

to vindicate me in what I consider my unfortunate position as a result of my divorce, I began this fight.

"A few days ago for the sake of Marylyn it was proposed that if I had complete control of my own daughter and lived with her during the school year, I would be willing to have the child visit with Dr. Thorpe during summer vacations.

"My proposal was accepted.

Asked Diary's Sealing.

"I also demanded * * * that my diary, the contents of which have so maliciously and scandalously been used outside of court, and which have been wrongfully taken from me without my knowledge, be turned over to Judge Knight and be impounded and sealed.

"They acceded to my demand.

"Dr. Thorpe is returning to me about $5,000 in securities which I gave him last April."

Anderson threatened to "reopen the entire case."

The dapper surgeon told the United Press:

"I capitulated because I didn't want my daughter's name dragged through the courts for years—when she is old enough to understand."

Miss Astor's statement, issued supposedly in violation of promises between the bickering parties not to talk about the case out of court, sent Dr. Thorpe's attorney, Joseph Anderson, storming into Judge Knight's chambers.

Claims Agreement.

Waving the printed statement, the lawyer, pale with rage, declared he was "thinking of reopening the whole case."

"We had a definite agreement in the judge's chambers that no statements were to be issued," he said. "I'm going to see what the court has to say about this."

Judge Knight announced, however, that he would not re-open the case because of the bickering. He added that "this settlement is by no means final."

"Custody of Marylyn actually is in the hands of the court. It can be changed at any time either party does anything that could warrant the court taking such action."

Some time later, from the office of Miss Astor's attorney, came another statement, couched in more moderate terms in which the actress said she "fought for Marylyn—I feel that I have won, and this feeling makes everything worth while."

Hollywood, not particularly disturbed by this conflagration, minor in comparison with revelations from the actress' diary—which she claims Dr. Thorpe stole from her—breathed easier at the legal conclusion of the case.

Judge Rebukes Parents.

Final chapter of the celebrated case was written in a stifling courtroom. While the actress-mother sat, her head bowed in one hand, Judge Knight issued a scathing denunciation of the entire action.

"The welfare of the child seems to have been lost sight of in this case," he said.

"All that has transpired heretofore between mother and father or in the individual lives of either of them becomes a closed issue in this case henceforth," he asserted.

The statement was regarded as referring to the diary.

The wording of the decision awarding custody of little Marylyn said:

"The minor child of the plaintiff and the defendant will remain with the defendant, Mary Astor Thorpe, for nine months beginning September 1 and ending May 31 of each year, said date to be varied in accordance with the opening and closing of school.

With Father on Vacations.

"The plaintiff Thorpe shall have custody and control of the minor child during the vacation period commencing in June and ending in August, the exact dates to be fixed with school opening and closing.

"Each parent shall have the right of reasonable visitation, but the minor child shall not be taken by either parent from her home on week-ends or nights.

"It is further ordered that the said minor child shall not be removed from the State of California without an order of the court or consent in writing of both parents."

After the judge had read his order, three affidavits were presented by A. P. Michael Narlian, one of Dr. Thorpe's counsel, reportedly in an effort to "clear the names" of two women placed in the physician's bedroom by testimony in the case.

The affidavits were made by Mrs. Lillian Logan Miles, her mother, Mrs. Mary Logan, and Mrs. Mary Scofield.

Whitewashing Charged.

Attorney Roland Rich Woolley for Miss Astor objected this was an attempt to "whitewash testimony that was entered formally."

Narlian protested the case was being closed with "aspersions still remaining on these women's names."

Judge Knight announced he would admit the affidavits only if they contained denials and did not make counter-accusations.

As soon as Judge Knight finished reading the decisions in a rapid, even voice, Miss Astor stood up, and, after searching vainly for her attorney, Roland Rich Woolley, hurried from the courtroom.

She was smiling as she walked quickly down the aisle past groups who held out their hands and shouted words of encouragement. Asked if she had anything to say, she murmured:

"Please—not now."

Dr. Thorpe, who sat with his chin on his clasped hands throughout the reading, was immediately surrounded by a knot of lawyers when Judge Knight finished speaking.

It was over the diary that the fiercest row raged. Miss Astor wanted her book of memoirs returned to her, presumably to be destroyed. Dr. Thorpe wanted to keep it as a club over his former wife's head.

Film Colony Trembled.

The film colony, which was on the verge of panic as new disclosures were threatened, wanted the diary removed from the public eye, no matter how it was done.

The case, which has dragged through three weeks of intermittent sessions, was near a new collapse when Judge Knight collected the principals in his chambers at court opening today.

For an hour and a half, Judge Knight was closeted with Miss Astor, her former husband and their attorneys, in an effort to iron out last-minute differences which cropped up over the question of week-end custody of little Marylyn.

The actress fired a bombshell into the assemblage when she declared she would not submit to any settlement in which Dr. Thorpe had the child over week-ends during school months—the period when the little girl is to remain with her mother.

Dr. Thorpe, his voice rising so that it could be heard at times in the courtroom outside, refused to accede to this.

Judge Knight, in spite of bitter protests of Dr. Thorpe's attorneys that the father was entitled to custody throughout the year on week-ends, ruled in favor of the actress, explaining it would be "injurious to the child" if she were shunted back and forth weekly.

The actress' former husband, dressed in the same tan coat and gray trousers he has worn through the last week of the case, stalked out of conference rooms ahead of the others, frowning. A few minutes later Miss Astor, trimly dressed in navy blue silk with a tiny shovel hat perched jauntily on her reddish hair, came out with her lawyer, Roland Rich Woolley. Her eyes were wet with tears but she was smiling. She nodded at several of her friends, who sat in the courtroom.

The settlement ended the war between the divorced parents after it finally became so fierce that the film world was reported to have sought to silence embarrassing disclosures.

During 10 days of actual testimony, lawyers for the darkly tanned "society surgeon," holding the pages of Miss Astor's diary over the slender actress' head, had dragged the names of John Barrymore, Playwright George Kaufman, Publisher Bennett Cerf, Daniel Silberberg, a New York broker, and Dr. Mortimer Rodgers, noted New York surgeon, out of the sizzling book of memoirs and spread them on the record of the case.

Although Judge Knight declared no pressure had been exerted by anyone in the motion picture industry to end the dispute, it was known the powerful Will Hays office had stenographers in court for every session.

Mendel Silberberg, attorney for the missing Kaufman, also attended several conferences and was present unobtrusively during the squabbling today.

In Films Ten Years.

Picture people were silent on the effect the publicity given her battle to regain custody of her daughter, whom she surrendered in a pre-divorce agreement with Dr. Thorpe last year, would have on the star's future status in films. Reports in the trade were that exhibitors all over the country were clamoring for Astor pictures, in order to capitalize on the publicity.

Miss Astor admitted she had been approached concerning a contract with a London company, but said her contract with Columbia was still in effect.

The diminutive star, born Lucille Langhanke in Quincy, Ill., 30 years ago, has been in films about 10 years, getting her first starring role in "Don Q," one of Douglas Fairbanks' pictures of silent film days.

Text of Astor Case Ruling

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 13.—Following is the text of Superior Judge Goodwin J. Knight's order regarding custody of Marylyn Thorpe, 4-year-old daughter of Mary Astor, film actress, and her divorced husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe:

"An agreement has been reached between the parties to this action which has, in the main, the approval of the court.

"It is not a function, nor is it the purpose of the court to take cognizance of matters unrelated to the issues here involved, but the extraordinary circumstances surrounding this action prompt brief comment.

"This proceeding has from the very first been obscured by morbid sensationalism and by a furor of publicity damaging to both parties. The chief victim, however, is a little child, whose inherent rights and welfare have seemed to escape adequate attention.

"It is the duty of the court to protect those rights, and to look to the welfare of the one individual in this case who can at this time have no voice in the disposition of her fate and person.

"While the court, with certain reservations and requirements of its own, has approved an agreement that bestows custody of Marylyn Thorpe to the mother for a period of nine months and to the father for a period of three months in each year, let it be clearly understood and remembered that the court is not bound by the agreement between the parents.

"The court, may, according to its best judgment, set aside this agreement at any time and rescind or modify its own order. Hence, the order about to be entered is not to be regarded as a permanent order, but is in the nature of a temporary arrangement to be made permanent only if found to work to the advantage and best interest of the child, Marylyn Thorpe.

"All that has transpired heretofore between the mother and the father, or in the separate lives of each, becomes a closed issue from today insofar as this court and the orders of this court are concerned.

"It is with the future care and protection of the child that the court concerns itself and will continue to concern itself.

"Let neither parent feel that either has gained an advantage over the other; for if there is any victory in this ending of a most unfortunate controversy it lies in the fact that an innocent child has been spared the further likelihood of future grief and humiliation.

"From conversations with the mother and father, as well as from an investigation of the conditions under which the child has lived subsequent to the divorce of the parties, the court believes that hereafter both parents will sincerely and attentively endeavor to discharge their full responsibility to their child.

"Much has been said here and in the public press concerning a certain diary written by the mother and held in the possession of the father. In fact, the court feels that altogether too much has been said about the diary and far too little about a flesh and blood child and her fundamental right to a wholesome and happy existence.

"With the contents of the diary, or with its present or ultimate possession, this court is in no wise concerned except as the diary or publication thereof, in part or in whole, may effect the welfare and influence the life and development of the child, Marylyn Thorpe.

"It is obvious that any hurt suffered by the mother as a result of publication of the diary, or any part thereof, will fall eventually with greater force upon her child. Further, the court feels that such publication by consent and direction of the father not only would work pernicious mischief now, but by the very nature of his action would establish between father and child a condition which, as she reached maturity, would cause her to look upon such a course with natural abhorrence.

"Dr. Thorpe has agreed to surrender the said diary to the custody of the court, and it is, therefore, an order of the court that the diary be possessed and sealed and placed in a depository for safe keeping. This depositary cannot release the diary without an order of the court.

"The court will take such steps now and in the future as may be necessary to assure strict compliance with its order or orders. The issue as between father and mother has, to the satisfaction of both, and with approval of the court, been settled.

"In admonishing the parents to abide by their own agreement and the instructions contained in the order about to be entered, the court closes this phase of the case with an earnest hope that it will quickly be forgotten, and that the life and development of this 4-year-old baby shall be permitted to proceed far from and free from the baneful effects of embittered parental strife.

"The minor child of the plaintiff and defendant will remain with the defendant, Mary Astor Thorpe, for the nine months commencing September 1 and ending May 31 of each year; said dates to be varied in accordance with the opening and closing of school.

"The plaintiff, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, shall have custody and control of the minor child during the vacation period commencing in June and ending in August, the exact dates to be fixed by school opening and closing.

"Each party shall have the right of reasonable visitation, but the minor child shall not be taken by either parent from her home on week-ends or nights.

"It is further ordered that the said minor child shall not be removed from California without an order of the court or the consent in writing of both parents."

France Forbids Mass Enlisting In Spanish War

Meets Italian Objections; Awaits German Views; Bans Arms Sale.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 13.—France tonight met halfway Italian objections to her proposed neutrality pact in the Spanish war by agreeing to stop mass enlistment of volunteers, and awaited anxiously a reply from Nazi Germany.

The cabinet of Socialist Premier Leon Blum, however, asserted it was powerless to prevent individual volunteers from enlisting or private contributions of money and food to the civil war combatants.

The decision to permit no organized recruiting of French citizens was deemed answer to both Premier Benito Mussolini and to this nation's Rightist critics who have charged Communists sought to raise an international workers' army to aid the Madrid Socialists.

If the French concession to Italian criticism that France gave "moral encouragement" to the Spanish government placated Mussolini, the attitude of Germany was believed to be the remaining stumbling block to getting the neutrality pact into effect.

Germany's formal reply, expected today, had not arrived tonight and belief was expressed Chancellor Hitler still had not decided upon a course of action in view of the reported execution of German nationals last week by Spanish loyalists.

With Italy and Germany in the fold 13 European powers would be banded together in a pledge to supply neither Spanish Fascist-rebels nor the government with arms, munitions or other war supplies.

Great Britain Anxious.

London, Aug. 13 (AP).—Great Britain tonight watched with growing concern the delay of European powers in effecting practical neutrality in the Spanish civil war, while six airplanes took off from English airports and were believed headed for the scene of conflict.

Four British planes flew from Heston, two of them said by field officials to be bound for Madrid. The other two assertedly were intended for rebels at Burgos.

Two Dutch airplanes left Croydon Airport and were believed intended also for the Burgos rebels. British pilots were at the controls.

The British government's fear that the neutrality proposal advanced by France never could be made effective was inspired by unconfirmed reports that German, Italian and French airplanes already had been delivered to Spanish rebels.

Loyalists Warn Rebel Ship

Talk Over Telephone.

(Dispatches from Hendaye, on the Franco-Spanish frontier, reported that Mola and Franco talked by telephone over a connection established between Burgos and Seville. The conversation reportedly marked the first direct contact between northern and southern forces. Hendaye also reported that northern and southern columns met at Merida, important railway and highway junction.)

Considerable credence was given to the reported rebel air raid on Malaga since Seville dispatches sent by neutral observers confirmed that Franco had launched a land and air offensive against the most important loyalist naval base.

Foreign warships in Gibraltar Bay were re-enforced with arrival of the U. S. S. Oklahoma from north Spain ports.

Gibraltar was alarmed when the American ship exchanged salutes with H. M. S. Queen Elizabeth, British battleship.

Greatest Offensive.

Madrid, Aug. 13 (AP).—The government of Spain tonight threw every force at its command against the Fascist insurrection in a mighy effort to end speedily the death and destruction of civil war.

By land in the south, in the air toward San Sebastian to aid loyalists there, and into the Gibraltar Straits with warships, the government ordered is greatest offensive.

The revolt, loyalists proclaimed, must be stamped out "within a few hours."

Outside northern Oviedo, the government fighters hurled heavy artillery fire in an effort to recapture that munitions center from the rebels.

Tenant Union Head Is Held in Murder

Greenwood, Miss., Aug. 13 (U.P.).—John Bennett, local president of the National Tenant Colored Farmers Union, was arrested tonight for questioning in the murder of two white planters near Grenada yesterday and brought to the Leflore County Jail here.

Deputy Sheriffs George Blaybul and Ed Brunson said the N. T. C. F. U. was organized by Chicago colored men.

Bennett was brought here "because the Grenada Jail was full of witnesses," the deputies said.

Tommy Jones, one of the colored men charged with the murders, was secretary of the local group of the farmers' organization, according to the deputies. Jones and Andrew Hemphill, the other man charged with the slaying, were held in the Hinds County Jail in Jackson, Miss., 150 miles away, for safekeeping.

Officials tonight said they believed the slaying of the planters, William Simpson and W. R. Ingram, was "planned dellberately."

Police Seek Filipino In His Wife's Death

Kansas City, Aug. 13 (AP).—A young Filipino musician who had accused his white bride of being ashamed of their East-West marriage, was sought tonight by police as her butcher-knife slayer.

The nude body of Mrs. Phillip Hernandez, Kansas farm girl, who married Hernandez only a year ago, was found in a hotel room today. Nearby was a blood-covered butcher knife. A note indicated the writer planned suicide

French Military Pact Reaffirmed by Poland

Warsaw, Aug. 13 (AP).—Poland today gave assurance the Franco-Polish Alliance still is the cornerstone of its military policy.

The pledge of continued alliance was regarded here as of the greatest importance, and informed sources hinted it might presage a loan from France to speed re-armament.

Bruno Bonturi, Monterey, Calif.

Elizabeth Cage, Exuvi, Ark.

Jose Fahocking, Mayaguez, Puerto Rico.

The destroyers Kane and Hatfield, now on the North Atlantic Coast, were designated by the Navy yesterday to relieve the Battleship Oklahoma, which now is engaged in removing Americans from Spain.

The two vessels, which will be under the command of Commander Stephen B. Robinson, commander of Destroyer Division Seven, will proceed immediately to the New York Navy Yard for outfitting and probably will leave for European waters within ten days.

The Postoffice Department said yesterday it had ordered United States postmasters to refuse until further notice parcel post packages addressed to Spain.

West Virginians Hear Knox Urge Workers' Share in Profits of Capitalist System

G. O. P. Rally Hears Nominee Warn Against 'Suicide' Schemes

Vice Presidential Candidate Decries Antagonism Aimed at Stockholder as Republicans Open State Convention.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Mr. Chairman, members of the Republican Party of West Virginia:

I judge from the size of this gathering that there are a good many Republicans in West Virginia. It is a great pleasure to greet you. You are veterans of the political wars, and the political wars in your State are real wars. The State of West Virginia was born in a time of national division on issues vital to the life of the Nation. Your people were nurtured in political controversy. I have the feeling that a West Virginia Republican is a very real Republican, with a large chip on his shoulder.

I judge also, from the greeting you have given me, that you Republicans of West Virginia are enthusiastic about the future. You are right. From Maine to California there is a great groundswell of public support of the Republican campaign and of the Republican candidate for the Presidency, Gov. Alf Landon. You have good reason for your confidence in the results of the November election.

Let me tell you the real reason why our ticket will win next November. The fundamental reason is that the American people are a practical people. They cannot be fooled indefinitely. It was the first Republican President in our history who said "you can fool all the people some of the time and some of the people all the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time."

In the American people there is a canny streak of common sense. The abstractions of economic theory have little appeal to them. But they are themselves shrewd and practical economists. They understand the eternal verities in a hard practical sense. And they know that the present Administration is too expensive a luxury to continue four more years.

'Let's Look at The Record.'

As Al Smith would say, let's look at the record. In the summer of 1932 the people of America were in deep distress. They were at the bottom point of a grievous depression that had been for three years bringing misery and heartache to this country and to all the world. Our factories were idle, our stores were stagnant, our mines were shut down, our farms were bankrupt. Finance was discouraged and investment was stopped. Unemployment and destitution had their grip on the lives of the people. It was that darkest period before the dawn. The source of all this misery was a World War, which had destroyed capital and demoralized currencies and ruined international trade.

At this lowest point of distress the Democratic Party set out to sell the American people the false proposition that the Republican Administration then in office was responsible for the depression. It set out to sell the American people the false proposition that a depression caused by a World War was due to mistakes of the Republican Administration. It set out to sell the American people the false proposition that it could and would end the depression by establishing a better Government. It held out to a suffering people false promises that it would cure unemployment and restore markets and revive industry by act of Congress.

Do you recall what those promises were? Read the Democratic platform of 1932. Read the speeches of its candidate for the Presidency. There was a promise to reduce the cost of government. There was a promise to balance the budget. There was a promise to reduce taxes. There was a promise to keep Government out of private business. There was a promise to encourage private enterprise. There was a promise to restore agricultural production. There was a promise to lower the tariff. There was a promise to preserve a sound currency. Believe it or not, there was a promise to reduce the number of Federal employes and to abolish Government commissions, committees, corporations, and agencies. A majority of the American people, beaten and worn by depression, accepted these promises and entrusted their Government to these promisers. Your own State of West Virginia was one of the States that accepted these promises.

Cites Administration's Broken Promises.

You all know what happened. The present Administration made hash of every one of these promises. Every plank in their platform was thrown overboard. Every promise was broken. What hidden forces led this Administration to embark on its road to ruin may never be known. Historians of the future will tell our descendants that the years 1933 and 1934 constitute the strangest and most incomprehensible period of misgovernment in our history.

This Administration embarked on a series of blind, reckless, and cruelly expensive experiments on the vital institutions of American economic life. It inaugurated a policy of blind expenditure of the people's money. It established policies that undermined credit and currency. It forced experiments that harried business and restricted production. It began at once to create an enormous Federal bureaucracy, the largest in any government in the history of the world.

From the beginning thoughtful people saw in these broken promises and strange experiments and reckless expenditures not only a breach of trust, but a menace to recovery. Within the Democratic Party itself distinguished leaders like Senator Glass and Senator Gore and Gov. Smith and your own West Virginian, John W. Davis, realized that this mad course would injure the Nation.

But the masses of our people still relied on the promises of recovery, still believed in the good faith of the Administration. Under the stimulation of the most powerful Government propaganda in history, they demanded that the Administration be given its way. In Congress, both Republican and Democratic members went with the tide. In all American history no Administration has had such complete freedom to carry out its policies. In 1933 and 1934 the American people said to the Roosevelt Administration: "We are in economic distress. You promised to end our troubles. We do not understand your program, but we trust you. Go ahead."

What did the people get in return for this complete confidence? They got the AAA, which took bread and clothes from the poor. They got NRA, which reduced production and retarded recovery. They got 800,000 Federal employes, chosen by the Farley system of selection. They got more than 50 new Government boards, commissions, agencies and committees to interfere with American business and regiment the lives of the people.

Calls Government Economic Vaudeville.

What the American people got was three years of continuous economic vaudeville. It has been a grand show. In the words of the theatrical press agent, it has been stupendous and colossal. In one ring we have had Mr. Ickes, with his famous illusions act, giving the people illusions of permanent public works and better housing. In another ring we have had Mr. Wallace, in his famous disappearing act, in which he makes food and clothes disappear before the eyes of the people. In another ring we have had Mr. Morgenthau, with his famous juggling and balancing act, in which he juggles the dollar while trying to balance the budget. It has been the most prolonged and the most expensive amateur hour in history. In November, the American people will give all these performers the gong.

It has been a grand show. But the people have grown tired of it. There are not enough breathing spells between the acts. It costs too much. The people have grown nervous, watching the glittering balls juggled in midair. Too many have been broken. Even the Democrats are walking out on the show.

Some cynic has said that republics are ungrateful. Another has said that the people have short memories. But the American people do remember the promises made to them in 1932. They were promised an orderly and economical Government. For a time they were led astray by the Pied Pipers of economic experiment. In their distress they approved economic quackery. For a time they were dazzled by the pinwheels and the rockets of New Deal fireworks.

But they were not fooled permanently. They know now the economic truths that put to shame the extravagances of the present Adminisration. The past three years have given the American people an invaluable demonstration of elementary economic principles. These truths may be harsh but they are valuable. The lesson may be expensive, but it is worth the cost. One of the truths is that a world depression cannot be cured by economic tricks. Depressions grow out of morbid and diseased conditions in our economic system. The world depression of our time was not caused by the mistakes of business men or financiers or farmers. It was caused by the dislocations of war, followed by unnatural conditions in trade and currencies. Such a situation cures itself by wiping out the diseased conditions. A political administration that pretends to be able to end a world depression by economic sleight-of-hand is a hypocritical administration or an ignorant administration, and America does not want either kind.

'Experiments End In Failure, Disaster.'

The reckless experiments have ended in failure and disaster. The wreckage is all about us. There remains only to clean up the wreckage and pay the bill. It is a large bill. It was a long spree and there was lots of breakage. And our American people are now aware of the size of that bill. They want to make it as small as possible. They do not want to see it increased. And that is the reason they want a change of Administration. As the experiments of 1933 failed, the present Administration became frenzied and hysterical. It adopted the fatal policy of pouring good money after bad. Its policy finally degenerated into a general program of squandering its way out of its difficulties.

Let's look briefly at some of the aspects of this bill, incurred in the past three years, which the people must pay. There is first of all the Federal debt. When the present Administration took office in March, 1933, the Federal debt was $21,000,000,000. Today it is more than $34,000,000,000. Three years of Federal activity have added $13,000,000,000 to the burden of Federal debt. That is $110 for every man, woman and child in the country. That new load has been added to a debt of $150 already outstanding. A baby born today will start life with a debt of $260 on his shoulders.

If this stupendous increase in the burden of debt had been forced by the failure of Government revenues, it would have been excusable. If the depression had reduced Government revenues from taxation to the vanishing point, it would have been necessary to face deficits to meet the costs of relief and the ordinary expenses of Government. But there is no such excuse. This weight of debt has come from waste and extravagance and costly experimentation above and beyond a cruel pressure of taxation. Last year the receipts from Federal taxation were just under $4,000,000,000, nearly a half billion more than they were in the abnormally prosperous year of 1929. While the national income has been falling to the lowest levels known for a generation, the taxation of the people by the National Government has been steadily increasing. The debt load of the people has been increasing while they paid current taxes higher than they have ever borne except in time of war.

Figures are dull things, but the story of a nation's downfall can sometimes be told in figures. In 1929, in the midst of an unparalleled prosperity, the Nation's income was $80,000,000,000

$53,000,000,000
Cost Last Year.

In that year of plenty the cost of Government in America, Federal and local, was $12,000,000,000. Last year the national income was about $53,000,000,000, and the cost of Government in the United States was more than $15,000,000,000. In the space of six years the cost of Government in this country has grown from one-seventh to more than one-fourth of the Nation's income.

This primrose path of governmental squandering leads only to disaster. The steady progress of natural recovery is hampered by the burden of taxes and shadowed by the fear of inflation. The road of history is strewn with the wrecks of nations engulfed by waste of the people's money. The Roman republic collapsed under the weight of taxes. The French revolution was set alight by the rebellion of an overtaxed people. The American revolution was the result of long-smoldering resentment of unjust taxation.

The money wages of the American worker have risen since 1932, from the progress of natural recovery. But as his money wages have risen, so has the cost of living. The price of the city worker's food has risen 20 per cent under the New Deal. The cost of his clothing has been increased 13 per cent. And the American worker faces today the possibility of that ruinous rise in the cost of living which comes from inflation of currency and credit.

It is a law of our social order that a bureaucracy grows by what it feeds upon. Once a government starts on a career of waste it finds itself unable to stop. A government once embarked on a policy of subsidies and gifts must maintain itself by further subsidies. For a people faced with this situation there is only one answer, and that is to install another government.

The American people must pay for this orgy of extravagance. There has been much talk about soaking the rich. To the plain man, working hard for a limited wage, soaking the rich seems an easy arrangement for meeting the cost of Government. In practice it does not work out that way. There are laws of economics and mathematics working here, and these laws operate to limit the soaking of the rich. Beyond these limits, taxing the rich destroys wealth and capital, reducing investment, reducing production, and reducing wages. No Administration before the present Administration has so paraded its love for the plain people, especially around election time. But the figures on taxation do not confirm this affection. In the year 1930, under the Republican Administration, income taxes and corporation taxes, which come generally from the well-to-do, totaled $2,500,000,000, while the taxes on consumers, the hidden taxes paid by the wages of the people, were less than $1,500,000,000. In the year 1935, under the present Administration, the income and corporation taxes had fallen to less than $1,500,000,000, while the taxes on consumers had doubled to $2,500,000,000. The share of the burden of taxes borne by the mass of the people has risen under the New Deal from 30 per cent to 60 per cent. My authority for this statement is the President of the United States.

'Tax Burden Falls On General Public.'

To many people it seems a just and feasable arrangement to pay the expense of government from taxation of rich and powerful corporations. Here again there are limits set by forces beyond the control of government. When corporations are taxed beyond reasonable limits the burden falls, not upon the stockholders, but upon the general public. Confiscatory taxes on corporations result in the destruction of assets, and this means higher costs for goods and lower wages for the workers. Last year in New England the largest cotton mill in the world closed down for good. Seven thousand workers were thrown out of work. There were various causes of this unhappy affair, but taxation was a major element.

In our American society there should be no antagonism between the worker and the stockholder. Our capitalist system rests on the corporation, large or small. This capitalist system has grave defects. There are inequalities in it. But it has built the greatest productivity in the history of mankind. It has given the American worker the highest wages in all history. The man who would tear down this marvelous system when there is no equally productive system to replace it is an enemy of his country. I want to see our economic system purged of its injustices. I want to see it preserved for its benefits.

I want more than that. I want to see in the future a real share-the-wealth development in this land. I want to see an increasing share in the profits of this system going to the workers. I want to see this come about, not by any suicidal scheme of destruction, but by an extension of the ownership of corporation shares by the workers. Unseen and unnoticed, this process has been going on a long time. There are 12,000,000 owners of corporate shares in this country today. War and depression have temporarily set back this great movement. It will begin again. In this movement lies the prospect of a genuine share-the-wealth program. In it there is the prospect of industrial peace in this country.

But a Government bent on squandering the Nation's assets can offer no prospect of human betterment. Nation's in the past have eaten out their own substance in this fashion. The sober common sense of this American people is aware of the situation. The Republican Party offers the people an escape from the weight of debt that now presses upon them. It offers a way to avoidance of the inevitable inflation that present policies insure. On this one issue of economy in Government, of sanity in expenditures, of wisdom in budget making, the Republican Party can win the battle. But it offers more. It promises to free enterprise from the shackles of bureaucratic regimentation. It promises to preserve American enterprise for that great future it offers to the American worker.

Asserts Prophets of Doom Slander Worker.

The prophets of doom who picture Americans of the future as a race of exploited workers serving an aristocracy of intrenched greed slander the American worker as well as the American managers of business. There are relentless and unstoppable forces in our American system that guarantee for the future American worker shorter hours and higher wages and greater social opportunities. The Republican Party promises to encourage these forces—not to destroy the system which makes them possible.

In making these promises the Republican party makes them not to one group, one class, one section, but to all groups, all classes, all sections. It offers them in no partisan spirit. I speak to you as one Republican to other Republicans. But I do so with a deep conscientiousness of the fact that this campaign is far more than a partisan campaign to restore the Republican Party to office. This is a campaign to restore sanity in government, to bring about economy in government costs, to renew free enterprise. The campaign is not against the Democratic Party. That party does not represent the strange and un-American policies that have misgoverned the Nation for the past three years. The great leaders of that party have repudiated these policies. Their party has been seized by alien forces, forces that have no kinship with the Democratic Party which has traditionally stood for freedom of institutions and moderation in government no less than the Republican Party. Go out and fight to win West Virginia for our cause in November. But go out with the understanding that the fight is not only for the Republican Party, but for the whole Nation.

Discuss Tax Reduction at White House

A forecast that taxes will not be increased and may be "slightly reduced" came yesterday after a White House conference. New U. S. Law on Gin Labels in Effect August 15th

LABELING: "... will require an accurate statement in the case of distilled spirits (other than cordials, liqueurs, and specialties) produced by blending or rectification, if neutral spirits have been used in the production thereof, informing the consumer of the percentage of neutral spirits so used and of the name of the commodity from which such neutral spirits have been distilled, or in case of neutral spirits or of gin produced by a process of continuous distillation, the name of the commodity from which distilled ..."

What these new Federal requirements mean to you ...

AFTER AUGUST 15, 1936, the American Public can tell from gin labels:

1. THE SOURCE from which the gin is made—grain, cane products, etc.
2. THE METHOD by which the gin is made—either compounded or distilled.

On the Fleischmann label you will find this statement

"DISTILLED FROM AMERICAN GRAIN"

This means that Fleischmann's Gin is distilled in one continuous process, directly from American grain.

Since 1870, interrupted only by the years of Prohibition, Fleischmann has been distilling gin in this, the time-honored American way.

Fleischmann starts with the purchase of the grain and controls every step in the smooth-flowing process which ends with the finished bottle.

Fleischmann is convinced that there is no better way a distiller can consistently produce a uniform, well-balanced gin, especially suited to the distinctive American taste than by this method.

The Fleischmann Distilling Corporation, Peekskill, N. Y.

"DISTILLED FROM AMERICAN GRAIN"

Fleischmann's Gin is distilled directly from grain ... in one continuous process, from the grain to the finished bottle ... the time-honored American way. 90 Proof.

Randolph Scott, Actor, Marries DuPont Heiress

Mrs. Marian Somerville Secretly Wed to Film Star, He Reveals.

Randolph Scott, Virginia-born film star, and Mrs. Marian du Pont Somerville, famous and wealthy horsewoman, of Montpelier, Va., were secretly married five months ago, it was revealed yesterday by the handsome, 6-foot bridegroom in Hollywood.

Nowhere did the revelation cause more surprise than in the rich, fox-hunting country of Orange County, where the romance began last spring.

Scott, who made his way in Hollywood from cowboy pictures, or "horse operas," to roles in "So Red the Rose" and "Follow the Fleet," was born in Glen, Va., January 3, 1903.

Not far from Glen is the birthplace of Scott's bride—beautiful Montpelier, once the home of President James Madison and Dolly Madison, now a famous showplace in Virginia.

Scott took a vacation from Hollywood last March, and returned home. He had known Mrs. Somerville since he was a boy attending Woodberry Forest School, near Orange. The couple were seen together at Montpelier during his vacation, but few suspected a romance.

Scott revealed in Hollywood yesterday that they slipped away and were married at the home of friends in Charlotte, N. C., on March 23. When work called him back to Hollywood, he said, they decided to keep their marriage secret because it came so soon after the death of his father.

Scott said he expected his bride to join him in a few days.

The new Mrs. Scott was divorced from Thomas H. Somerville, a well-known sportsman, in October, 1935.

Both Scott and his bride are members of distinguished families. His great-great-grandfather was John Tayloe, who came to the colonies in 1740 as the personal representative of the King of England. Tayloe returned to England to marry the Countess of Essex, and then came back over here and built the historic Octagon House in what was to become the National Capital.

Became Madison's Home.

Octagon House became the home of President Madison and his vivacious wife, Dolly, after the British partially burned the White House in the War of 1812. Dolly Madison, by the way, was a sister of Scott's great-great-grandmother.

Mrs. Scott is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William du Pont, and is descended from the founder of the great munitions dynasty in this country. Her brother, William du Pont, jr., lives in Wilmington, Del.

Her stable of horses, quartered at Montpelier, is one of the finest in the world. She owned Troublesome, a noted steeplechaser, one of the few American horses to finish in the English Grand National at Aintree. She also raced Annapolis, which won important steeplechase events in all parts of this country.

She was married to Somerville on December 28, 1925. In divorcing him last October she charged extreme cruelty.

Cutter Lands Food For U. S. Eskimos

By the Associated Press.

The cutter Northland advised Coast Guard headquarters yesterday she had landed 4½ tons of food at Barrow, Alaska, and that the immediate famine situation among Eskimos there was in hand.

At the same time, the cutter said, "existing destitution is not so serious as earlier reports indicated."

"We have landed enough food to take care of the immediate situation," the cutter's commander said, adding that additional supplies would be sent ashore "within a few weeks" by a Hudson Bay steamer.

Rites Tomorrow For Miss Kearney

Funeral services for Miss Mary C. Kearney, lifelong resident of Washington and former Government clerk, who died Wednesday at Georgetown Hospital, will be held at her residence, 77 K street northwest, and at St. Aloysius Church tomorrow at 8:30 a. m.

Prior to her retirement in 1933 she was a clerk in the Postoffice Division of the General Accounting Office. Before taking this post she was for more than 40 years in the Treasury Department.

Surviving Miss Kearney are a brother, Joseph M. Kearney; five nephews and two nieces.

Shooting Stars on View In Northeast Skies

Williams Bay, Wis., Aug. 13 (AP). The earth tonight will get its annual glimpse of the Perseids showers—shooting stars at a frequency of 100 an hour—plainly visible in the northeastern sky. Dr. Otto Struve, director of Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago, said the astronomical treat will be visible again tomorrow night and for several succeeding nights, but growing more faint.

Crash Kills Driver Near Rockville

One man was killed and one severely injured yesterday afternoon when a brick truck crashed into the rear of a parked gasoline truck on the Frederick, Md., road in Gaithersburg, about 5 miles from Rockville.

The dead man is Elmer Hogan, 56, of 224 East Patrick street, Frederick, and driver of the brick truck, operated by the Frederick Brick Works. His son, Harry Hogan, who was riding with him, was injured severely and taken to a hospital by the Rockville Fire Rescue Squad.

Harry Harple, of Baltimore, reported driver of the gasoline truck, was said to have parked on the side of the road in front of a filling station, where Hogan's truck crashed into it. Both trucks were traveling toward Rockville.

King Edward Starts Fad of Jersey Shirts

Sibenik, Yugoslavia, Aug. 13 (AP). King Edward has started a new style trend along the Dalmatian Coast.

On a vacation cruise aboard the yacht Hahlin, he purchased a simple cotton jersey shirt, worn usually by fishermen in this country.

Today, citizens from every walk of life besieged clothing stores in a demand for a similar shirt and dealers said their stock was running low.

Shell Flies Wild, Imperils Staff At 29th's Camp

Gen. Reckord, Aids Become 'Targets;' 5th Maryland Group Arrives.

By Phillip Austensen.
A Staff Correspondent.

Indiantown Gap, Pa., Aug. 13.—Wartime France was vividly recalled to Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding the Twenty-ninth Division, here today when a shell from one of the division artillery batteries fell short and ricocheted off the edge of the forward observation post from which the general was viewing the firing.

Gen. Reckford and his party were in the concrete post when the shell struck on the edge of the parapet and gave the staff a bad moment. No one was injured, however.

The colors of three States and the before the tent of Maj. Gen. Reckord, commanding the Twenty-ninth National Guard Division, in camp here for annual maneuvers. The four flags represented the geographical part from which units of the division originate.

Hoisting of the colors today symbolized the first concentration of the entire division as a unit since it was demobilized after the World War. The three States are Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

The Fifth Infantry Regiment, Maryland National Guard, arrived in camp today by truck from Camp Harry W. Nice, at Cascade, Md., where it was mobilized last Saturday. The First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, arrived yesterday, as did the "lost battalion" of the 116th Infantry, Maryland National Guard, which had remained at Front Royal since the rest of the Ninety-first Brigade left there after a review Sunday.

Brig. Gen. Samuel Gardner Waller, commanding the Ninety-first, had directed that the battalion remain there because he did not want to send all the truck drivers back after moving the rest of the brigade and run the risk of accidents.

Private Stricken.

Private Carmen Sylvania, of Company C, 121st Engineers of Washington, was removed to the Harrisburg General Hospital by the regimental ambulance when he was stricken with an attack of acute appendicitis. His condition was satisfactory. This was the second attack of appendicitis since the regiment arrived in camp.

The general health of the division is good, however. Practically no serious illness or accidents have been reported since the first day of camp, medical officers reported.

Sergts. Frank B. Kaye and Lester M. Luther, of the 121st Engineers, were commended today by Gen. Reckord on the large map they are making of the camp.

Janitor's Job Aim, Man Fires School

Aberdeen, Md., Aug. 13 (AP).—Andrew Markline, 45-year-old WPA worker, was charged with arson today after Sheriff Granville C. Boyle said he confessed he set five fires in a school building in an effort to obtain a janitor's job.

Markline, employed in the building of an annex to the school here, was arrested by officers who investigated the fires. Damage was from $3,000 to $5,000, Sheriff Boyle said.

Boyle said most of the fires were set at the close of work, in wastebaskets in the schoolrooms.

D. C. Taxpayers Refused Place On Study Group

Board Holds New Revenue Survey Is Task for Officials Only.

The District Commissioners yesterday rejected the suggestion of Rufus Lusk, secretary of the Washington Taxpayers Protective Association, that taxpayers be placed on the special tax committee engaged in a study of possible new sources of municipal revenue.

Pointing out that the cmmittee already has done a major portion of the work, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, in a letter to Lusk, said:

"The Commissioners are of the opinion that this particular study is one which should more appropriately be made by officials of the District government."

Hazen said, however, that consideration will be given to holding a public hearing before any recommendations are made to Congress.

"The Commissioners also desire to say that they appreciate the fact the operating costs of the District government have been steadily increasing," Hazen's letter said.

"They will do everything in their power, not only to hold down the operating costs but if possible to reduce such costs, having always in mind in this respect that any action taken by them shall not result in the impairment of necessary and efficient public service."

This policy of economy will be stressed especially this year, Hazen added, in view of the anticipated deficit of nearly $1,000,000 at the end of the current fiscal year.

It's our family's whiskey, neighbor—and neighbor, it's your price!

Tom pointing to our Family's Whiskey being sent over some place

We can't hardly go any place these days but what we see our Family's Whiskey being sold to somebody. This here picture shows the three of us last week-end when we was up visiting some of our relations. It's Tom in front and then me and my brother William. Tom's hollering at Barney Wright "Hey, what you got there?" Barney claims he's got more Wilken Family Whiskey customers than any others, and Barney's got a good trade with a mighty fine class of people. Harry E. Wilken folks are fast finding out how they can enjoy the same whiskey as us distillers!

If it's the same over your way as it is up around where we live—it don't seem to count much how well-to-do a person happens to be—you find him going for our Family's Whiskey just as much as folks that have got their eye on the neighborly price our Family's Whiskey is sold at.

So it can't be how little money everybody is charged for our Family's Whiskey that's making folks so excited over it. You just like what we distillers like in our whiskey. You like tastiness and something just as smooth as can be—so it just sort of oozes down your throat.

Well, you're getting just the same as us! The Wilken Family Whiskey has got everything that Dad and us and Grandad ever found out concerning making whiskey extra tasty and smooth. And knowing how you can't go to fiddling with a recipe and expect it to turn out good, you can count on this here Family's Recipe of ours always being just one way—the way you like it!

Another Crime Commission.

Now New York is turning to its citizens in the fight to put down crime.

A nonpartisan committee to assist all law enforcement agencies, primarily in wiping out racketeering, has been established by Mayor LaGuardia, with H. F. Guggenheim, former Ambassador to Cuba, as chairman. At the recommendation of the extraordinary grand juries which cooperated in the successful Dewey racket investigation, a group of civic leaders from all boroughs of the city will be drafted to scrutinize criminal court procedure in New York and particularly to guarantee complete protection to witnesses in racket cases. The Dewey investigation, best known for its conviction of the Luciano gang, found its major obstacle in the hesitancy of cowed business men to testify against their extortioners.

In emphasizing rackets, the New York committee differs somewhat from that recently established here under the title of the Washington Criminal Justice Association. Having no such problem to contend with, the Washington committee—now completing its organization—will concentrate mainly on checking the disposition of criminal cases.

In other cities where citizens have volunteered co-operation with the police the committees have followed still other designs, each according to the peculiar circumstances it faced. For example, as pointed out by Eugene Pharo on the opposite page on Monday, in Philadelphia citizen groups are devoted principally to work in the juvenile field, with special attention paid to the anticipation and prevention of delinquency.

The philosophy behind all citizen crime commissions, however, is the same. Each aims to put expert unofficial advice at the service of the law enforcement agencies, and to develop intelligent civic co-operation to the end that errors of omission or commission in the handling of crime problems may be corrected.

The Next Comptroller General.

Representative Lindsay Warren's announcement that he would not accept the Comptroller Generalship, if it should be offered to him, calls attention to the fact that this important post has been vacant for six weeks. In that period routine work has been carried on, but the staff left by J. R. McCarl is naturally reluctant to deal with matters involving new policies. Even some routine work, it is reported, is far behind schedule for want of positive leadership.

Selection of a successor to Mr. McCarl is one of the President's foremost responsibilities, at least so far as personnel is concerned. With the Government continuing its enormous spending program, the Comptroller General occupies a key position. By its very nature this post calls for a man of training and unusual courage. Important as it is that the new comptroller be selected without delay, it is far more important that the most competent available man shall be appointed, with complete disregard for politics.

There are some indications that the appointment is being delayed by astute political maneuvering. Mr. Warren has wisely decided that he can best serve his constituents and his country in Congress. Doubtless he realizes, too, that the technical requirements of the job limit a proper choice to a relatively small number of highly trained individuals. But not all would-be Comptrollers General are thus willing to bow to the public intreest.

One factor in the political scramble to obtain this appointment is the presence in the General Accounting Office of 1,500 employes hired since 1933 without benefit of civil service. Most of these employes had to secure indorsements from Capitol Hill. Now, it is reported, they are being sent back to the Senators who recommended them, with appeals in behalf of a candidate already employed in the Comptroller General's office. It would be worse than disgraceful if this sort of political debt-paying should enter into the choice of the official who, for the next 15 years, will be charged with the responsibility of protecting the Government against unlawful expenditures.

Even if he were so inclined, President Roosevelt could not afford to permit himself to be influenced by tactics of this sort. Recently he issued an order belatedly placing first, second and third class postmasters under the merit system. Spokesmen for the Administration during the campaign are making a determined effort to convince the electorate that there will be no further resort to spoils. The appointment of a new Comptroller General will be the first acid test of this "conversion." If the selection should be made on any basis other than the experience, competence and character of the applicants, the Administration's newly found enthusiasm for the merit system will be demonstrated as eyewash, pure and simple.

Not Reassuring.

A crudely obvious kind of showmanship was displayed in setting the stage for the White House announcement that no new taxes will be recommended to Congress at the next session and that present taxes may even be reduced while removing existing inequities and administrative difficulties.

This olive branch, held out to taxpayers as the Presidential election approaches, will not allay the alarm felt by intelligent citizens who understand the seriousness of the budgetary position. Indeed, it is distinctly disturbing to confidence for the Secretary of the Treasury, and the heads of the important Ways and Means and Finance Committees, to make a concerted effort to minimize the difficulties ahead of us.

"With continued recovery," says Secretary Morgenthau in a letter to the President, timed for publication as the latter departs on an electioneering tour, "we are steadily approaching a revenue yield which will be entirely adequate to cover the expenditures of government and to reduce the public debt." Summoned posthaste to a superficial White House conference of an hour's duration, Senator Harrison and Representative Doughton express equal confidence that budgetary balance is not far distant. "Business improvement is at such a pace," said the former, "that we are going to reach a balanced budget much earlier than we expected." Increased revenues and decreased relief costs, in the opinion of the latter, are "tending to bring expenditures and receipts together."

Not one of this optimistic triumvirate of Administration spokesmen hinted that a drastic reduction in expenditures is quite as essential as an increase in revenues to produce the promised budgetary balance. If revenues should reach the extraordinarily high figure of $6,000,000,000 in 1936-37, as some experts predict, there would still be a great gap between income and outgo. With estimated expenditures during the current fiscal year in excess of $9,000,000,000, not even Pollyanna would expect an increase in revenues sufficient to eliminate the anticipated deficit.

Moreover, Representative Doughton's assurances that relief costs are decreasing ignore the fact that WPA rolls are beginning to rise again. And from present indications, additional sums will be needed to carry the work-relief program through the fiscal year. The studied refusal to discuss these awkward facts is not calculated to strengthen the confidence of business in the Administration's financial policies.

Moreover, it must be extremely irritating to executives, now struggling to find their way through the administrative mazes of the new levies on undistributed corporate earnings, to be suddenly told that Secretary Morgenthau favors simplification of procedure and modification of taxes that create unfairness to consumers or to trade. The inequities calling most insistently for redress at the moment have been created or aggravated by the tax measures of the present Administration. A broadening of the income-tax base is needed for other reasons than as an alternative to excessive levies upon corporate profits and confiscatory impositions upon the very limited number of taxpayers in the higher income brackets.

In short, effective tax reforms require courage to secure because they would be politically unpopular. Similarly, the economies essential to budgetary balance can only be obtained by resistance to popular pressure. Any official who tries to persuade the public that budget-balancing is going to prove a speedy and painless process is either ignorant of the facts or else more concerned about vote-getting than the disordered state of Federal finances.

The Show Must Go On.

On the eve of her fifty-seventh birthday, Ethel Barrymore announces that she will never appear in another play. No farewell tour marks her leave-taking; no drawn-out curtain bows; no traditional back-glancing summaries. The announcement was made over the radio, paradoxically enough for one to whom audience reaction has been the breath of life since the gay nineties. If such a parting had been part of her repertoire, it would have been called by critics a "neat performance, well-timed and restrained."

Perhaps the love of grease paint is hereditary. Clemence Dane, in writing "Broome Stages," the story of a long line of thespians, subscribed to this thesis. To be born without theatrical ambition into such a family as the one she depicted was heresy. That actors are born and not made was also the theme of "The Royal Family." And those who agree need look no further for human prototypes than the Barrymore family for confirmation.

At the age of 14, Ethel Barrymore was sharing makeup boxes and curtain calls with her grandmother, Louisa Drew, in the cast of "The Rivals." To the valuable advice which she must then have received, the young actress was soon able to add that of her uncle, John Drew, who was the idol of the American stage at that time. Through him her association with Charles Frohman was begun. Somewhat later, she appeared with her two brothers, Lionel and John. Old-timers can scarcely remember when there was not either a Drew or a Barrymore treading the boards.

Even now, with plans for retiring, Ethel Barrymore can not fully relinquish her relations with the stage. She stands ready and willing to help young people improve their dramatic talents. With Lionel in constant pain from arthritis, John ill in a California hospital, and Ethel taking her last cue, one wonders about the future of the Barrymore torch, already handed down for three generations. That is, until one remembers that Miss Barrymore's son and daughter are already rehearsing in stock. Surely it will only be a slight intermission at most until SRO signs are out again for another generation of Barrymores.

Although the entertainment they afford is costly, life is certainly going to seem hollow when Harry Hopkins and his troupe of fan dancers finally fold their tents and silently slip away.

The Nation is becoming so accustomed to the amusement offered gratis by WPA that much more than the talent of a Maj. Bowes will be necessary as compensation. From this viewpoint, though from this viewpoint alone, it is sad to contemplate the termination of a system which is so facile in providing comic relief, regardless of its flop as work relief.

Because one of the principals is well known here there is particular local interest in the mix-up between Lieut. Col. Brehon Somervell, now WPA Administrator for New York City, and Mrs. Sara S. Dennen, whose resignation as director of women's activities under the gallant colonel has just been accepted for "the good of the service." The former District engineer officer is under some handicap in the dispute because, as he says, "where I come from (it's Arkansas) gentlemen do not engage in controversies with women." No such inhibitions are cramping the style of Mrs. Dennen.

As far as can be gathered through the dust of battle Mrs. Dennen was fired for staging "an educational music program," supplied by WPA entertainers for WPA seamstresses. From the viewpoint of WPA theory, it certainly seemed a logical idea. The entertainers were paid for entertaining and the audience of several hundred "workers" were paid for being entertained, and thereby probably doing a good deal to earn their money.

Perhaps the project did not quite fulfill President Roosevelt's assurance to Congress that all WPA work "should be useful in the sense that it affords permanent improvement in living conditions or that it creates future new wealth for the Nation." But why bring that up? It is generally admitted that Mrs. Dennen's "musicale" was going off in a spirit of good, clean fun, with added zest from the fact that the economic royalists didn't even realize they were footing the double bill.

But Col. Somervell, perhaps a little crotchety because they called him off the Florida Ship Canal project, couldn't see it the way Mrs. Dennen did. He seems to have denounced the whole affair as "opera bouffe" and the finale of the "musicale" was its promoter's dismissal, in quick march time. With her, apparently, is being ousted a functionary with the gorgeous title of "unit manager in charge of WPA sewing projects."

And the end is not yet. Mrs. Dennen feels quite bitter about the debacle; intimates that there is a casual connection between Moscow and her ousting; explains that the musicale was not merely sound boondoggling in itself, to further "workers' rehabilitation," but was also "necessary in order to keep the women calm and prevent Red agitation." And she adds, with perhaps a good deal more truth than poetry, that "those who wish to save America had better do it while there is yet time."

There is no use lamenting what might have been, but it does seem a little sad that Gilbert and Sullivan died before the New Deal. What they could have done with WPA would have made the name of Harry Hopkins ring down the aisles of time.

Wartime Marksmanship.

From the Infantry Journal.

One day a guest of Marshal Lefebvre expressed an indelicate envy of his host's renown and wealth. The old Napoleonic fire-eater cocked a quizzical eye at his civilian friend. "Eh bien," he said. "Come down into the courtyard, sir, and let me fire 20 shots at you from 30 paces and if you live you may have all of this. I must have had a thousand times that many balls fired at me from closer ranges to get it." The gentleman declined.

Now incredible though it seems old Lefebvre was probably not far from the truth in his estimate of 20,000 rounds at almost point-blank range. Statistics for the 1813-1814 campaigns show that Napoleon's armies expended 10,000 rounds for every hit and certainly the sundry enemies of the First Empire did no better.

The recent spy cases are extremely puzzling. For one thing, they happened at a time when Congress wasn't drafting an appropriations bill for the War Department.

It would have been better if things had been so arranged that an empty head, like an empty stomach, wouldn't let its owner rest until he put something in it.

An Idaho hermit, 90 years old, has never seen an automobile. He doesn't know what's missing him.

Japanese Sportsmanship.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently you pointed out editorially the manner in which the German population was being hoodwinked by the Nazi press in falsely reporting the Olympic results, and the narrow-minded brand of sportsmanship displayed by Herr Goebbels' official organ, when it berated the American track victories because of the contribution by members of the African race. That, if you please, was sportsmanship exhibited by the host to the Olympics.

Yesterday, the Associated Press reported a contrasting episode of sportsmanship which was enacted during and after the record-breaking Olympic Marathon. Kitei Son, the young Japanese who came in first after setting a new world record, on being congratulated on his splendid performance, replied through an interpreter, "Much credit for my victory must go to Mr. Harper, of England." Ernest Harper ran second.

"From the time we started, Mr. Harper kept telling me not to worry about Zabala (the winner of the last Olympic Marathon and who set a terrific pace in this race), but to let him run himself out," Son continued. "So we paid no attention to him or any other runners and set our own pace. Zabala and the others went far ahead, but we didn't worry. Then we passed Zabala and I thought I'd win. Please say Mr. Harper is a very fine man for telling me about Zabala."

Certainly by this time the Nazi host to the 1936 Olympics should realize that sportsmanship like music is universal, and is not restricted to any race, color or creed.

Surely the commendable spontaneous tribute to sportsmanship as exhibited by Kitei Son and Ernest Harper, should not only go a long way to deflate the Aryan fable of superiority with which the Nazis have been inflating themselves, but will be remembered long after the present Olympic records will have been broken and forgotten.

Esperantist Movement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The attack of Nazi sympathizers on the world congress of Esperantists, now in session at Vienna, comes with something of a shock to Washington Esperantists, who have been enjoying for two weeks the visit of Miss Isobe, of Japan, as representative of the Esperantists of that far land. The attack, strange to say, was made because of the Jewish ancestry of some of the adherents of Esperanto, who now number more than 2,000,000 throughout the world, and are of more than 40 nationalities.

In order that Washingtonians may know more of this world movement for better understanding among the nations, which is to celebrate its fiftieth anniversary in our city next summer, a free class for beginners is opening this week at the Northeast Branch of the Public Library, Seventh and D streets northeast, at 7:30 p. m. Thursday. Text books are fifty cents and instruction will be free.

H. B. HASTINGS.

Labor's Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In answer to Albert Maverick's letter in The Post, of Aug. 11, I would like to state that organized labor has indorsed nobody for President. Mr. Green, Mr. Berry and Mr. Lewis are not organized labor. They are merely Democrats who hold executive positions in groups and the only one in the group who could possibly talk for organized labor, Mr. Green, frankly states he is talking for himself only. Mr. Berry is a New Deal official and would be expected to indorse it for that reason and Mr. Lewis is one who thinks nobody is right unless he agrees with Mr. Lewis. As for the Republicans in the labor unions, they will vote Republican as in the past.

As for Mr. Maverick's statement concerning business and government, he ought to realize that the sooner we take government out of business and put business in government the sooner the country will get back to normal. That in a nutshell is the reason why businessmen and all people who think sanely want Landon to be elected President.

Washington's Words On Blocs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is a subject to which I desire to direct attention which, in my opinion, is a growing menace to the welfare of our Republic. That is, the growth of powerful blocs. We have always had, it is true, blocs which have exerted their influence upon our legislators, but never have they been as threatening as they are today. Some of these blocs even go so far as to seek to form national political parties. Their influence upon legislation and elections, whether for good or for evil, is tremendous. The forthcoming elections will be determined in a large measure by their support or non-support, and the candidate who hopes to be elected must endeavor by his promises to favor principles that are pleasing to the largest number.

Among the most powerful blocs at present are the labor bloc, the farm bloc, the veterans' bloc, the old-age pension bloc, the Union for Social Justice bloc, the share-the-wealth bloc, the Chamber of Commerce bloc and other lesser blocs too numerous to mention, pertaining to nearly every phase of life.

Our first President, Washington, must have felt to some extent the influence of coercive cliques, for he had the sagacity to see far ahead into the future, when he cautioned in his Farewell Address: "All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities are destructive of this fundamental principle and of fatal tendency. They serve to organize factions, to give it an artificial and extraordinary force, to put in the place of the delegated will of the Nation, the will of a party, often a small but artful and enterprising minority of the community; and according to the alternate triumphs of different parties, to make the public administration the mirror of the ill-concerted and incongruous projects of faction, rather than the organ of consistent and wholesome plans digested by common councils, and modified by mutual interests.

"However combinations or associations of the above description may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely, in the course of time and things, to become potent engines, by which cunning, ambitious, and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people, and to usurp for themselves the reins of Government; destroying afterward the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion."

It is highly befitting in these troublous times that we take seriously to heart the wise admonitions of our first President, and consider that we are first of all Americans, and that we will support only those principles which are for the good of our people and country as a whole, and will frown with disdain upon the wishes of selfish factions.

Olympics To Tokyo.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Japan scored another victory in your editorial on the victory of the Korean in the Olympic marathon—another victory of Japanese propaganda. When Japan grabbed Manchuria there was great danger that the United States would join with other powers in instituting a committee of inquiry on the spot—not the year-too-late Lytton Commission, but a local committee for instant action. But the Japanese ambassador persuaded Secretary Stimson that such action would alienate the "moderates" in Japan who were just about to put a curb on the military freebooters in the autumn of 1931.

For five years we have been hearing this stuff, and now we have the latest version, namely, that the award of the 1940 Olympics to Tokyo has "greatly" helped "those moderates who are seeking to "curb the jingoistic elements." It is mere propaganda addressed to the multitudes who devour the sporting news, but perchance catching an occasional editor. It distracts American attention from the Japanese fleet in the Chinese port of Amoy. And what could be more celestially sweet than for the Americans to keep on looking for the victory of the Japanese "moderates" while the Japanese government annexes Asia bit by bit?

Prof. Reischauer shows in the current issue of Foreign Affairs that there are in Japan various classes and many opinions, but all agree on the conquest of China except an insignificant group among the intellectuals.

Your Japanese "moderates" are simply those who would have the army conquer China more slowly under the direction of the civil government instead of doing it more rapidly without regard to the civil government. Even the famous Japanese Christian, Kagawa, when touring America, dragged into his speeches anti-Chinese propaganda. With the military dominating the government and the government controlling all news and all means of discussion, there is no prospect whatever of internal forces turning Japan from her aggression.

Meddling In Other Countries.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Among the grave questions which now agitate internationally-interested people is: How far must we be influenced by certain crys for aid? Ecclesiastical bodies have repeatedly chided the United States for not interfering in Mexico. Just now comes an implied request that Christians come to the aid of a racial non-Christian group, in a local matter which concerns one or more of the countries of Europe.

There is as much reason that we come to the aid of the present Spanish republic, now acknowledged by us, or to the aid of the rebels who are seeking to overthrow it, as to attempt to dictate to any country outside our own how it should treat any particular group of its citizens. Our people can, through the medium of the press, express their decided disapproval or their approval of measures adopted by any particular nation; but the Nation itself, or any particular group with the Nation's consent, may not enter the arena as partisans.

Back of any disposition to meddle, is a more fundamental principle. Is it not the plain duty of citizens living under any particular form of government, to adapt themselves to that government, whether this imply ecclesiastical or racial adaptation? Do not men and groups, whether political, ecclesiastical or racial, owe to the governments under which they live and have protection, loyalty, sympathy as far as possible, and support?

The Post Impressionist

"And Forever Young?"

Post Office, Friday.

THE story started: "For a century, the submerged sex had been getting ready . . . At a concerted signal, they threw away their corsets . . . Limbs became legs, and legs of no more significance than arms . . . On the beaches, across country, blew the ever freshening winds of freedom, stirring the curls on millions of bobbed heads . . . Woman unfettered, unencumbered, unafraid."

"This," said the Post-Impressionist, "is not quite true—but it's the way modernism thinks of itself, so is a pretty and modern compliment to modernism."

Yet it comes out of the grave. It comes from the final book of a man who, though everybody once read him, modernism has forgotten.

* * *

Well, I submit that, even if his ultimate novel (Beating Wings: Appleton-Century Co.) isn't its author's best, it is a pretty and poignant narrative of feminine ambition fighting envious environment. And I submit that a great deal of Robert W. Chambers ought to be remembered.

* * *

Of course, this goes without saying if one makes the "ought" imply that the mature Chambers supremely envisaged what the young people of his day most desired to read—which is another way of saying "what they most desired to be." Although himself born into the generation-before-last, he was the mouthpiece of the generation succeeding his own. At his peak, he seemed to possess eternal youth—certainly possessed tremendous popularity.

Indeed, there was no popularity equalling his—and not many influences. The Disraeli of the start of the century, he didn't (I'll say this again, presently) really picture real people. He didn't want to and didn't have to—for real people by the million imitated the people he created. Girls in shops and girls among what he called "persons of a certain caste" tried to be like the girls in his books ("of a certain caste"), and boys, particularly at college, tried as hard to be like his heroes as their fathers had tried to be Davis-and-Gibson Men.

But there was far more than all that to Chambers. There may be said to have been four of him, and there may be said to have been, in each of the quartet, genuine art. He could create illusion; he always had a story to tell and he always told it with grace—in a memorably clear pencil-script, by the way, on legal cap with many eraser marks, and copious additions to the left of the red margin.

* * *

He wanted to be a painter, but he wrote "The King in Yellow." That was Robert I, who could have been an abiding master of eeriness. Then came novels showing that he could have been a master of American historical romance. After an interval, came the satires.

* * *

He could have been a master of satire, too. He is supposed to have worshiped, in his final phase, the era wherein he spent his maturity. Really, he took deliberate refuge in a glamorous era of his own devising which preserved, however brilliantly, only the accidentals of his time; an era that, alas, "never was on sea or land!" Yet there he could scourge the accidentals with a scorpion whip.

Your columnist, then an associate editor of the Saturday Evening Post, will never forget the morning when George Horace Lorimer triumphantly tossed me the Ms. of Iole: "What do you think of that?" It was Robert III: the love story was more than ever sugar without stickiness—more convincingly remote from reality than ever—but the humor was satire.

Its subject bore strong resemblance to the Will Durant of the moment. Leyndecker drew a clever cover, which completed the likeness, and Chambers carried his theme into a series. Nevertheless, he persistently contended: "I never heard of Elbert Hubbard."

* * *

Chambers' vogue arose from his fourth Robert: from his erroneously so-called "society-novels"—and with these the critics believed, in some part erroneously, he sold his artistic inheritance. On the theory of his adoration for the Contemporary Spirit, into whatever form that ever-changing spirit changed, he was charged with persistent bowing before a false god.

Well, insofar as those crtiics were correct, Beating Wings, for all its fanfare to youth—and for all its ending on a high note—supplies a commentary on its author. The young sculptress-heroine is writing of today:

"The fittest physically (are they who) survive. Mind, unsupported by health, perishes. Old and exquisite civilizations pass amid the empty laughter of a brawny invader . . . The down-crash of civilization, dead levels, dirt, the death of beauty. Modernism, you know, beginning to totter; impotent, aware of its own sterility too late. Trying to use its fangs to the bitter end. Biting its own enervated limbs."

To the Post-Impressionist it seems Chambers' tragedy was that, although he could perfectly guide others into his land of delightful make-believe, he himself could not remain there.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

'Reverend's' Immunity.

Avoiding the subject of religion, which is the great taboo of American journalism, though a topic of universal interest, I believe we might abate the abuse of religious privilege by gentlemen of the cloth who make use of the title of "Reverend" as an immunity from fair criticism. The present time finds a number of political clerics in action, but the situation is not new. There were others at large during the prohibition era who bulldozed politicians, conducted strong-arm raids at night, maintained a supercongress a short distance from the United States Capitol and in at least one case, at Herrin, Ill., helped to whip a community into a bloody local war over an issue which was political and social but not religious.

The great difficulty is that once a man has completed a course in college which qualifies him for the title of "Reverend" we instinctively concede him a special standing in the community and almost never revoke his privileges, even though he publicly demonstrates he is an ignoramus, a fool or a rascal.

The course of study is not always such as would set a man apart from his fellow-men as a superior human, being and, in some cases, would not seriously tax the mentality of a high school student.

Thereafter, unless the man has been formally unfrocked by his ecclesiastical superiors, he may continue to use the title of "Reverend," with all the special consideration which it confers, in connection with activities of a non-religious and highly provocative sort. He may be entirely footloose, without a church or responsibility to any church authority, but his title is not impaired and he enjoys a status which may not be justified by his obvious character of the nature of his work.

Very often his motives are entirely malicious and against the peace of the community, but the fact that he once completed a course of study protects him from candid treatment. Though he be thoroughly unscrupulous or even a gun-toting killer, he is still "Reverend" and a privileged character. There have been such reverend politicians among us. Statesmanship and politics entail the most searching examination of past actions, personal life and motives, and the man who runs for the highest office in the United States is subject to violent, personal abuse, sometimes at the hands of the very men who protect themselves from retaliation by their cloth.

Doctors are examined by the public authorities before they receive the right to practice, and thereafter are bound by a code of ethics and by the special laws covering their science. Even lawyers are subject to certain restrictions.

• • • •

True, there are quacks and shysters, but the title of "Doctor" or "Attorney" does not exalt a man above the rest unless he has demonstrated his leadership. Newspapers, which also dip an oar deep into the troubled waters of politics, are constantly being called to account by candidates whom they oppose. Moreover, they have financial responsibility which preachers have not.

The title "Reverend" suggests that a man is on rather special terms with God, and even if someone were to prosecute a slanderous or otherwise vicious cleric for his public utterances he would draw his cloth about him and claim that he was speaking for God—a very strong courtroom defense, however hypocritical.

The fact that a man is footloose and without a charge is not necessarily to be held against his sincerity, for Christ Himself went about preaching informally. But in this country, where religion is organized, the bad ones are usually found among the footloose barnstormers, some of whom imitate the sweaty showmanship of Billy Sunday and even swipe bits of his formulated routine.

• • • •

I would not suggest that clergymen should be subject to a State licensing authority, but I do contend that the man himself and his utterances be judged strictly by themselves without special respect for the man's title of "Reverend." I believe also that ethical clergymen who accept the responsibilities implied by their titles, and avoid abuse of their influence and privilege, would indorse this proposal. As matters stand, we are unfair to the decent clergy, for we make no distinction between them and notorious fakers who are without conscience or honesty and, on the average, too ignorant for respectful consideration as clergymen.

If a man is going to play politics, and dirty politics at that, his opponents and critics should be allowed to treat him as a politician and examine his remarks as political statements, not compelled to observe an exaggerated politeness or endure the insults of a vicious freud in timid silence.

Born Of Depression

Farm Co-operatives Drew Momentary Strength From Panic Of 1873; Membership Now 3,280,000.

This is the second of a series of three articles discussing co-operatives in the United States.

By Herbert Plummer,
Associated Press Correspondent.

Farmer co-operatives in the United States date to 1872, although there are reports of activity in the movement prior to 1863.

In July, 1935, the names of 10,700 farmers' co-operative selling or buying associations, with a total estimated membership of 3,280,000, were on the "master" list of the Farm Credite Administration.

The first boom for the farmer co-operative movement in this country came during the depression of 1872-77. The Grange (patrons of husbandry) oldest of the general farm organizations, had been formed in 1867. Intended by its founders to be a fraternal order, farmers caught in the depression following the panic of 1873 turned to it for assistance.

In 1873 alone, 8,667 local granges were organized and the following year, 11,941. Collective buying was undertaken and co-operative stores were promoted in the North Central States. State granges in the South gave attention to the marketing of cotton. Co-operative grain marketing was undertaken in California. A co-operative bank was established in San Francisco.

With the advent of better times interest in co-operatives waned. Aside from a farmers' elevator movement in the grain States west of the Mississippi in the eighties and an attempt on the part of the citrus fruit growers to evolve a technique of co-operative marketing in the nineties there is little of record until the turn of the century.

Movement Revived At Turn of Century.

Beginning in 1900, the co-operative movement among the farmers took on new life. Local associations were organized at the rate of more than 100 a year, reaching the peak in 1920, when more than 1,800 marketing groups were formed.

The postwar slump in prices for farm products in 1920 again left the farmer in distress and there followed for the next four years an intensive campaign for large-scale centralized co-operatives. It is estimated that more than 800,000 farmers became interested in co-operatives for the first time.

They signed "ironclad" marketing agreements and delivered wheat, potatoes, cotton and other products to be sold on a "pool" basis, believing that, with control of the marketing of large quantities of a product, determination of price was in their hands. The campaign quickly spent its force, however, and interest lagged again.

The Federal Government entered the picture in 1929. Continued financial distress among the farmers prompted Congress to enact an agricultural marketing act. Co-operative marketing immediately became a live issue. During the next few years large-scale national or regional co-operatives were formed for the marketing of grain, livestock, cotton, wool, beans, sugar beets, dairy products, poultry, eggs and pecans.

Membership Greatest In Northern States.

For the past three years attention in the field has centered for the most part on perfecting existing associations and improving operating practices.

Of the associations on FCA's "master" list, 70 per cent are in the 12 North Central States, 9 per cent in the 17 Atlantic Seaboard States, 8.4 per cent in the eight South Central States, and 7.3 per cent in the three States bordering on the Pacific Ocean.

The States with the largest number of associations are Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois. Largest memberships are in Minnesota, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Missouri, in the order named.

Tax Reduction Hinted

by the revenue act of 1936, which constitutes a major improvement in our tax system. With continued recovery, we are steadily approaching a revenue yield which will be entirely adequate to cover the expenditures of Government and to reduce the public debt.

"Any changes in the tax structure should, therefore, not be in the direction of increased taxes. But this very situation makes it possible and timely for us now to consider revision of the tax laws with the purpose of removing any inequities or unnecessary administrative difficulties that may be inherent in the law and abating or modifying taxes that create unfairness to consumers of trade or have other disadvantages which outweigh their revenue yield.

Suggested Conference.

"I suggest the desirability of your asking Senator Harrison and Representative Doughton of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation to discuss with you the advisability of undertaking soon a thorough examination of the tax laws with the object of making improvements of the character I have outlined.

"It goes without saying that we shall be very glad to put the staff of the Treasury Department at the complete disposal of the committee."

The letter was dated August 10.

Harrison added to Morgenthau's predictions of a balanced budget.

"We have found business conditions to be improving so much and revenue receipts coming in so fast that we can reach the point of a balanced budget sooner than we had expected," he said.

Doughton declared "the improvement in business all over the country has had two effects—increased revenues and decreased relief costs. Receipts are going up and expenditurs are coming down."

Revenues of the Government are increasing in spite of the fact that the 1936 tax law, with its levies on corporation surpluses and its "windfall tax," growing out of the outlawing of the AAA, will not become operative until January 1. The provisions of this new law have caused considerable confusion and misunderstanding. It is probable an attempt will be made to iron out some of these obstacles to smooth administration. It is expected the new taxes will yield $800,000,000 the first year.

The Government has a list of about 200 miscellaneous taxes, many of them of the "nuisance" variety, any of which might be eliminated under a new tax program. Included are such items as leases on safety deposit boxes, sporting goods, refrigerators, automobiles, radios, phonograph records, matches, jewelry and cameras. It was indicated that no reduction in liquor taxes was anticipated.

Federal revenue receipts from July 1, the beginning of the present fiscal year, and August 11, were $482,837,352, compared with $439,604,331 for the some period last year. Income taxes amounted to $46,625,000 for the period, compared with $27,689,000 for the same days last year. Customs receipts increased from $40,547,000 to $43,043,000, and miscellaneous receipts from $298,000,000 to $365,760,000.

Processing taxes during the first 41 days of last year amounted to $27,931,000. They were virtually non-existent this year. Normal expenses of the Government for the period increased slightly. This year they were $494,352,000, compared with $492,294,000 last year. Thus, in spite of increased revenues, the Government was still running a deficit.

Available money has been increased, however, by return to the Treasury of some of the funds of some of the emergency organizations. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has turned back $195,000,000; the Federal Credit Corporation, $3,900,000; the Commodity Credit Corporation, $67,000,000, and the AAA $3,000,000.

In a statement issued through the Republican National Committee tonight, Representative Bacon (Republican), New York, Eastern campaign manager for the Republican Congressional committee, said "the New Deal hypnotists are at it again.

"The hurried White House tax conference today, and subsequent announcement by Secretary Morgenthau that no new taxes will be recommended to Congress at the next session, is a political gesture pure and simple. It should be viewed in the light of other New Deal promises so gaily broken.

"New Dealers are hearing from the folks back home. They are frightened. The truth is that the taxes have been increased nearly $2,000,000,000 under the New Deal. Despite this, the last June 30 deficit was the greatest of all. It amounted to $4,764,000,000. In all, since the New Deal started, deficits amount to $13,228,000,000. Even their soothsayers cannot find the way out of this except by taxes."

N. Y. Republican Critical.

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton, in a statement telephoned from Oneida, N. Y., said tonight the announcement from Washington that taxes would not be increased next year "was a political campaign statement and nothing more.

Peace Unit Opens West Coast Parley

Yosemite, Calif., Aug. 13 (AP).—On the theory that nations won't fight if they really understand each other, two score distinguished men placed on a council table tonight the overlapping problems of countries bordering on the Pacific Ocean.

They met as members of the Institute of Pacific Relations, which since 1925 has fostered the idea of preserving peace by creating international understanding of the social and economic problems confronting each country.

Charles F. Loomis, head of the institute's Hawaiian division, said the international aspects of the Roosevelt New Deal and Japan's expansion problem would bulk large in the discussions which are to begin formally Saturday.

China's struggle toward unification and industrialization and her problem as related to Japanese expansion will offer more potential material, Loomis said.

Directors Yield Bank of France Control to Blum

'Aristocrats,' Representing Group Of Financiers, Are Forced Out.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 13.—The "200 families," aristocratic band that largely controlled a nation's financial affairs from the time of Napoleon, tonight yielded its power in the Bank of France to the domination of a Socialist government's council.

The board of regents, wealthy men from widely diversified branches of industry who directed the bank for the "200 families," or major stockholders, stepped out by government decree.

They will not be deprived of their investment, but henceforth will have little voice in administration. Tomorrow a new council, with representation from labor, the French cabinet, agriculture, and business co-operatives will take over.

Leon Jouhaux, president of the Confederation of Labor, was the first man named to the new council, which hopes to liberalize credit policies, but maintain the franc on the gold standard.

It was expected the new council would continue the antidevaluation policy of the retiring regents and oppose inflation.

Since 1800 the ruling regents held control of the bank, which houses the nation's gold and issues the national currency. The liberal government of Leon Blum, seeking reform, charged the regents comprised a ruling oligarchy, that they passed on their power in family dynasties.

Because the old directors and the 200 major stockholders who elected them often directed other corporations and banks, the Blum reformists asserted the bank was not always administered in the interests of national welfare, and held that a nation's banking house should be administered under government control.

Nicaraguan Congress Votes U. S. Trade Pact

Managua, Nicaragua, Aug. 13 (AP). A new commercial treaty with the United States was approved tonight by Congress.

The trade treaty between Nicaragua and the United States was signed in March by the Nicaraguan Foreign Minister and Arthur Bliss Lane, United States Minister, and sent to Congress.

Statistics indicated the United States gradually was losing Nicaraguan trade to Germany, Great Britain and Japan. In 1935 Nicaragua bought 50 per cent of her imported goods in the United States, compared with 59 per cent the previous year and 70 per cent ten years before.

Birthday Of Horace

By William Lyon Phelps.

Roman Writer.

When we celebrate the birthday of a man, after 2,000 years, it is fairly certain that he will never be forgotten. It was Byron, I believe, who first said of a contemporary, whose works he did not admire, "This man will be read after Homer and Virgil are forgotten, but not until then."

This year the whole so-called civilized world is getting ready to celebrate the 2,000th birthday of Horace, who was born December 8, 65 B. C. Let me advise all who wish to read this extraordinary poet to get in one cheap and well-printed volume the complete works, in English naturally, and just published. This small and attractive volume is issued by the Modern Library, New York.

Horace, whose Latin name is Quintus Horatius Flaccus, wrote not nearly so much as most of our novelists in 1936, but enough to keep his name and works alive until the sun cools off.

He left four books of odes, one of epodes, two of satires, two of epistles, and a letter on the art of writing verse. Most of the facts of his life we learn from his own works, for he talked agreeably about himself. Horace's father was a freed slave. Horace loved him intensely and speaks of him affectionately and gratefully; partly because his father was determined that his son should have the best education possible. Instead of letting him go to the local schools in the country where his own farm was situated, he took the boy to Rome, and gave personal supervision to his education and character.

• • • •

Young Horace went to Athens to study in a great center of intellectual activity, and it is unfortunate that we have no detailed account of his life there or of the studies he pursued. He was there in 44 B. C., when Julius Caesar was assassinated.

He fought as a soldier on the losing side at the battle of Philippi. (See Shakespeare's play "Julius Caesar").

Later he returned to Rome and became an intimate friend of the great Maecenas, a gentleman of wealth and culture, whose lifelong friendship was immensely important to the poet. The Emperor Augustus treated Horace kindly. Horace was prominent in Roman society, but he loved to retire to his Sabine farm, where he had solitude for thought and for composition.

Horace and his friend Maecenas died the same year, 8 B. C. He was nearly 57 years old.

• • • •

There is no writer today who is more modern than Horace. He was a man of the world who loved moderation, good sense, the common pleasures of life, entertaining conversation, agreeable company, and in certain moods, natural scenery. Make the most of the present moment, was his philosophy. Yet this somewhat sceptical, ironical man of the world greatly admired, as other citified men have, the simple virtues of the farmers whom he knew.

Horace was a popular writer in his own lifetime, and after the great Virgil died in 19 B. C., Horace was the most commanding figure in the literary world. It was a time of peace and the fine arts were cultivated. Horace's poems are beautiful for their lyrical quality and for their extraordinary personal charm.

New Deal Heads Believe Relief Must Continue

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

They frankly say the $7,000,000,000 spent for doles and work relief since 1933 is not the answer. Relief does not return unemployed to private pay rolls.

Only through these fundamental changes in American life do they see relief rolls declining to the vanishing point:

1. Limit workers to the span between 18 and 65 years.
2. Shorten work weeks, perhaps to 30 hours.
3. Expand the social security system.

That is their three-point program, their long-range plan for reducing ranks of the present 10,000,000 unemployed. Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins is its chief, though silent, supporter.

Hopkins Explains Stand.

He explains his stand in his own words, a statement read before the House Appropriations Committee when it was considering the $1,425,000,000 work-relief appropriation for 1936-37:

"The best figures that are available would indicate that in 1928 and 1929 there were as many as 2,000,000 or 2,500,000 people unemployed, and from that up to probably 15,000,000 unemployed in the United States late in 1932 and early in 1933.

"There are now probably 5,000,000 more employed than were employed in March, 1933. But you have got to remember that since 1929 there has been a 400,000 net annual increase in the number of people looking for work."

Hopkins' statement is significant. It means that, in the economic boom years of 1928 and 1929 one-fifth as many Americans were out of work as there are now. He continues:

"We have had a distinct improvement in three years. There ought to be more. If we are not going to get an increase in private employment through normal channels in the near future, we should be thinking of doing other things than merely planning for unemployment relief.

Children Work, Men Idle.

"For instance, it seems perfectly absurd to me that we have 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 children under 18 years of age that work in industry when we have high-school graduates, college graduates and others roaming the streets looking for jobs.

"It seems equally absurd to me that we have some 3,880,000 working in factories and in industry in America over the age of 65. In other words, I think the emphasis and the thinking of Congress should be far more on the whole problem of unemployment itself than on the problem of relief."

The Administration already had taken short, but straight-ahead steps toward limiting work ages. President Roosevelt advocated the plan in a formal address before Young Democratic Clubs of Maryland at Baltimore last spring.

The social security board is providing old-age pensions for persons over 65. The National Youth Administration, operated under Hopkins, is furnishing part-time employment to high school, college and graduate students to keep them at their studies instead of looking for work.

A shortened work-week is a strong possibility if President Roosevelt is re-elected. A bill to cut hours to 30 is pending before Congress, and has support from the American Federation of Labor. Adoption and enforcement of the measure would cause employers to add thousands to their pay rolls.

Inescapably Linked.

Social security is linked inescapably with relief. Celebrating its first anniversary this week, the board announced 1,152,000 aged and unfortunate persons—each one a potential relief roll client—are receiving benefits paid jointly by the Government and 40 States. Federal donations totaled $47,000,000.

More important than the aged, blind and dependent children now on social security rolls is the unemployment insurance plan. It does not go into effect until next year, but 8,000,000 persons in 16 States already are under the law's provisions.

If they are thrown out of work, they will receive varied monthly benefits paid from a feserve filled jointly by a tax on their earnings and an employers' levy on pay rolls. The reserve will ultimately reach $60,000,000,000.

England used a social security system to support her unemployed in the post-war depression years. The program was first installed at the turn of the twentieth century, replacing poor laws passed under Queen Elizabeth in the late 1500s.

The British plan of social security is far more developed than the American program. This country's law does not include either agricultural or domestic workers, and its provisions cover only shops with eight or more workers.

"Exchange" Hunts Jobs.

In addition, as soon as an English worker becomes jobless and is drawing insurance benefits, a government employment "exchange," with a network of sub-offices all over the country, starts trying to place him. The service is operated more intensively than the United States Re-employment Service.

The English discovered, however, that their social security system would not support the empire's unemployed; that regular unemployment benefits ran out before a man could find work.

The Government then appropriated funds to its security organization to give "extended" insurance to needy. The word "dole" originated from that plan, and later became a byword in America. It was the only means of livelihood for 20,600,000 persons before the Government started work-relief.

The new English system practically bankrupted its insurance reserves and was abandoned for straightout, direct relief. The British next developed a means test of determining need and paid benefits on that basis. The American Federal Emergency Relief Administration also made its grants in accordance with need.

England had little or no work-relief. Germany and Italy, however, found employment for large numbers of their able-bodied men in the army. Germany introduced a system of work camps to which needy were drafted.

While the Democrats definitely pledged their next administration to a continuation of the work-relief program, there is a small bloc of influential New Dealers seeking a return to the dole.

Called More Expensive.

Members of the group throw overboard Hopkins' argument that jobless have a right to work, that their skills and morale must be sustained, that a work program adds to the Nation's wealth through public improvement projects.

Officials favoring the dole, base their arguments on the $34,500,000,000 public debt and the fact that work-relief, in regard only to the daily United States Treasury statement, is twice as expensive as direct relief.

President Roosevelt has said, however, that the public debt might safely reach $70,000,000,000. He said prominent bankers provided the figure for his statement.

Democrats are making their future work-relief plans in the face of the possibility they might be discarded altogether should Gov. Alf M. Landon become President with a Republican administration.

While G. O. P. relief plans have not been fully announced, they apparently favor a return to direct relief financed by Government grants-in-aid to individual States and local administration.

Strangely, several New England States still are operating under township poor laws much the same as the British drafted during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Many townships still have "poormasters," a term directly traceable to Elizabethan England.

In addition, the Republicans would discard present social security plans and set up another type of system. Gov. Landon has not elaborated on his plan, saying only that he would back amendments to the law to make it workable.

Lottery Advocates Gain Injunction

A temporary restraining order prohibiting the Postoffice Department from barring from the mail matter of the National Conference on Legalizing American Lotteries, Inc., of which the socially prominent Mrs. Oliver Harriman is president, was issued by Justice Jennings Bailey in District Court yesterday.

Mail now in the hands of the Postoffice Department addressed to the conference was ordered impounded until a hearing on the suit for a permanent injunction against the postoffice can be heard.

Horace J. Donnelly, attorney for the conference, declared it was not engaged in conducting lotteries. It is promoting an organization which has for its purpose the development of legislation to legalize lotteries to be controlled by the Government, he said. In the furtherance of this scheme, he said, the conference began a contest in which entrants were required to answer questions as to what they would do with a vast sum of money to be realized from a Federally controlled drawing.

The original order was issued April 28, although the New York City postmaster, where the conference maintains headquarters, had given official approval to the contest plan.

The Once Over

Club Hurling Tourney

Plans for a great national tournament of golf club throwers as proposed by Elmer Twitchell, 180-pound national champion, are being completed and entries are coming in from all parts of the country. Mr. Twitchell's record of 170 feet against the wind is being widely pooh-poohed.

• • • •

"The facts show he had a following wind of 11 miles," writes 'Wild Swing' Badger. "That's nothing. In the last Knights of Columbus Tournament I threw a golf bag 185 feet and only used a three-quarters swing!"

• • • •

From Paw-Paw Creek comes word of an Arabian golfer, Ahbey Ahb-Sell, who is said to be the best prospect in the country for the berserk championship. Weird tales are told of Ahb-Sell's exploits. It is said of him that only last week, after missing a 6-inch putt, he threw his golf opponent for a total distance of 200 yards through heavy foliage. (The fairways were slow, too.—Ed.)

• • • •

Ahb-Sell is at his best when missing puts, and there is an unconfirmed report that on one turbulent occasion he not only threw all his clubs a remarkable distance, but then grabbed himself by the collar and threw himself 89 feet 4 inches into an abandoned well.

• • • •

Mr. Twitchell today outlined some rules governing the national club tossing tourney. They follow:

1. All contestants must carry regulation clubs. The use of rubber pads on handles or heads to give them additional bounce is forbidden.

2. Only one hand shall be used in hurling. The growing practice among irascible golfers of using both hands is to be discouraged.

3. Every contestant shall be entitled to three shrieks of rage before throwing his club or during the actual act of hurling.

4. If, however, a golfer feels that he gets more distance by penting up his emotions and emitting one terrific yell at the moment of releasing the club, it shall be optional whether he yells once or thrice.

5. All clubs shall be thrown forward. The custom of breaking a club into several parts and tossing them in all directions shall not be countenanced.

6. Golfers throwing clubs into the air for height rather than distance shall be considered null and void, which is their normal condition, anyhow.

Prospects.

7. Throwing caddies will not be tolerated.

8. No golfer shall be allowed to throw more than one club from any one tee without penalty. If he does not get the right distance with his first club he shall be permitted to throw another club with a penalty of one stroke.

Girl to Girl.

Take the lad I call my own.
Flaunt your lovely charms before him,
Raise him to a golden throne,
Fascinate or even bore him;

Little care I what you do,
In the realm reserved for Cupid,
Fighting for a lad or two
Strikes this girl as being stupid;

But if you would stir my hate,
If, in fact, you'd start me swearing,
Meet me with a duplicate
Of the outfit I am wearing!

Court Slows Spread Of Alberta Scrip

Edmonton, Ala., Aug. 13 (AP).—An interim injunction barring the City of Edmonton from taking the social credit certificates issued by the government of Premier William Aberhart was granted today by Justice Tweedie.

Application for the injunction was brought by Ronald Hannan Watson, "suing on his own behalf as well as other burgesses of the city."

The Edmonton City Council agreed last night to accept $86,000 in certificates from the provincial government in lieu of $55,000 cash relief grant expected for August.

Under the agreement—which, however, had not yet been signed—the city would purchase the certificates from the province, using the cash grant in payment.

The prosperity certificates, issued to ease the provincial government's financial burden, have met opposition from the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce and other groups.

Trade Unions to Make Checkups on Insurance

Business agents of all building trades unions in the District will make checkups with contractors to help them comply with the unemployment compensation insurance act as the result of a decision announced yesterday by the executive board of the Washington Building Trades Council.

Arthur L. Schoenthal, executive board chairman, said the system will expedite solution of many perplexing problems which the act brings up.

"Every business agent," he said, "will check all contractors to ascertain if the proper amount of unemployment tax is being paid on the job. This will assure all union workmen that the proper record is being made of their work with the Unemployment Compensation Board."

Germany Drops Export Subsidy, U. S. Informed

Experts Doubt Immediate Trade Benefits Will Follow Move.

By the Associated Press.

Capitulating to American commercial pressure, the German government yesterday formally notified the United States that it had forbidden further subsidizing of German exports to this country.

But informed authorities forecast little immediate expansion of trade between the two nations because at the same time Germany dropped its system of financing commercial transactions with the United States.

A note handed to William Phillips, Acting Secretary of State, by Dr. Hans Luther, the German Ambassador, expressed the hope that in view of the subsidy action the United States would cancel its recent decree levying heavy penalties on subsidized German goods.

The German move was, in effect, an overture to break a trade impasse in which the two countries have been locked since thhe Treasury clamped countervailing duties on ten German products more than a month ago. This step was mandatory under the tariff law prohibiting entry into the United States at regular duties of foreign goods benefitting from subsidies.

Treasury officials said last night the countervailing duties—amounting to between 25 and 50 per cent in excess of normal tariffs—would be lifted as soon as possible after assurances were received that the German practice of extending bounties or premiums to exporters had been terminated.

The German note, announcing that subsidies on all exports to the United States had been discontinued as of August 3, was transmitted to the Treasury immediately by the State Department.

Although present artificial commercial barriers between the two countries thus will be lowered, well-informed quarters predicted the effect will be to hinder future German-American trade intercourse rather than to expand it.

They based this conclusion on Germany's simultaneous elimination of its intricate system of foreign trade financing whereby it was able to conduct commercial transactions with the United States without dipping into its depleted gold or foreign currency reserves.

This involved the use of so-called "aski" marks both for purchases abroad and for paying bounties to German exporters to better enable them to compete in world markets under present international currency conditions.

The new German action forbids the use for such purposes of aski marks or any other form of scrip not fully convertible into foreign exchange. This means that future German purchases here must be paid for outright in negotiable currency.

SYNOPSIS.

Eden Faraday, young secretary, opens the door of a taxi and finds a man murdered. She is taken to the police station where she meets Jack Garnett, newspaper cameraman, and Owen Field, assistant district attorney, who arranges her release. Eden had been mistaken for Gracie Lincoln, a gunman's widow. The murdered man was a notorious gangster, Grappi. Eden's mother, Bridget Faraday, sells gowns and is in love with sauve Sidney Creighton. Eden and her spoiled young sister, Robin, and brother, Coburn, depend on their peppery grandmother. Because of rumor that Eden can identify the murderers Owen Field has her guarded. Raquel Rusak, an older woman, is trying to force Coburn Faraday to marry her. While at a roadhouse with Rusak, Coburn sees his sister Robin come in with Sidney Creighton. Eden goes with Garnett to see Gracie Lincoln, now married to Clint Jarvis, a taxi driver. Clint has been forced to drive the murderers of Grappi. Eden's grandmother is a friend of Mat Burke, district attorney. Eden promises to help Clint gain an audience with Burke.

CHAPTER XV.

In Danger.

Love was in Owen's eyes as he smiled at Eden across the pleasantly small table. He did not ask about her interview with Martin Burke. That was professional ethics, she knew, for she had already seen speculation in his eyes, suavely controlled.

He asked instead about Gran and on an impulse Eden confided to him her worry about Coburn.

"He's 21, in second year law at the university—but he seems not to be taking any interest at all."

"No second year man is ever very keenly interested," Field consoled her. "A young fellow is out of adolescence by that time—he is through with the humiliation of being a freshman and usually he has just discovered atheism, beer, and women. He's cockier than he'll ever be in his life again; he's an abomination to his elders and a hated superior to the frosh. But nature is kind to him. He grows older. Ultimately he discovers what a pathetic damn fool he is and after that he's saved. He packs away his pipes and ribald pictures; he takes a look at life and finds out he doesn't know more than God. So—until that happens—patience is the only cure."

"I'm not worrying about his school—though that's bad enough. It's—he's going to wrong places—seeing wrong people—dangerous people——"

"A girl, then?"

"A girl—who has friends that you would know—but not socially. People whose pictures are in your files—probably their finger prints, too."

"Not so good."

"Could I talk to him?" Field asked gently. "It would be a bit awkward—but it might be managed—you'd like me to do that, Eden?"

Flushes At Name.

He had never called her by her name before, and she flushed a little, but she met his eyes levelly. "Something ought to be done. It would kill my mother if she knew—she's a very proud woman. Could you come some time—to dinner perhaps——"

"Say tomorrow?"

"If you could——"

"I'd be very happy. You aren't eating your dessert."

"I must run, really. Mr. McLachlan goes to lunch at 12."

"I'll have my car sent around. You can't walk away down there."

"O, please, don't trouble. I can take a taxi perfectly well," Eden protested.

"I seem to recall," he smiled, "an occasion on which you took a taxi. We won't risk it. I think. Mind waiting a second while I telephone?"

When they were in the car moving slowly through the traffic he looked at her, sitting slim and erect with her hat tilted jauntily.

"Why are you afraid of me?" he asked suddenly.

She kept her eyes straight ahead. There was a queer small tingling in her wrists, but her voice did not falter.

"You're quite vain, aren't you? You really don't frighten people as much as you think."

"Then why are you bracing yourself against me, with that aloof look in your eyes? I'm really a mild and rather lonely man. I achieved this cross-examining scowl—it was a deliberate acquisition. Purely defensive. I have to yell at poor devils and blast them off the stand, because otherwise I'd get so sorry for them I'd be begging the judge for a not prosse."

"Really so big hearted? And I was priding myself on being undaunted—riding with you alone!"

He was, she told herself, a man you must either love or detest. And she could not detest him. She was afraid of him—afraid of the compelling force that emanated from his level look, the ruthless sort of splendor that swept her along into doing things and thinking things she did not wish to do or to think. He was handsome and dangerous to any woman's peace of mind, but there were no calms in him. When she was with him she felt as though she held the glittering menace of a silver sword against her heart, hating it, yet thirsting for the stroke that would end suspense. And any words with which she fended against it broke on the air with the shimmering futility of soap bubbles.

"And I don't want to fall in love with him," her heart wailed. "I won't fall in love with him—never—never!"

Holding fast to the thought, she was busy all day—and grim!

Stanley McLachlan, grave and gray and quiet, watched her with anxious eyes. He thought she was worrying and afraid, because unwittingly he had sent her into danger. He did not know how poignant was that danger! * * *

In the green bungalow, with the windmill looming over, Gracie Lincoln Jarvis sat in a stiff chair beside her bed and pulled her stockings off slowly.

The wind was whistling across the Illinois prairie and the bleak marsh lands, wailing under the eaves of the cheap little house. The scrim curtains at the window drifted out from the sill in the draft and shingles slapped the roof overhead, while icy airs crawled over the floor on the little half story upper room.

Sick and Cold.

Gracie shivered, buttoning a bathrobe over her faded blue pajamas. Her face was very white. She was sick and cold; she felt like dying and she told herself that she did not care greatly if she did. She knew now what was wrong—she was going to have a baby. A baby—when life was so utterly hideous! She said, heavily, "It's going to snow again—I can tell when the cold comes through the walls like that."

At the imitation walnut dresser, with its swimmy mirror and ornate decoration, Clint was shaving. He leaned over the hot lamp chimney to see his lathered face, and his hands were a little uncertain. Jack Garnett had got word to him, through a friendly rural mail carrier, that Martin Burke would see him early in the morning. That meant—nobody knew what it meant. It meant a sharp break, a change—danger and the breathless tautness of doing what Clint believed to be the right thing—doing it when the doing might mean death.

He had not told Gracie much—only that he was going to see Burke; that Burke had managed it so there would be no risk at all, so that no suspicion would fall on Clint if Monk's gang were tailing him—which inevitably they were.

Over his shoulder Clint cast worried glances at Gracie.

He loved her with a passion, naively pure. She had married him because marriage was the only way out of the frenzied chaos of her life, and Clint was resignedly aware that she did not love him as he loved her. That she married him, after Vick died, was enough. He was incredulously grateful, devoted, frantic with wretchedness now because Gracie was ill, unhappy, endangered, and he himself impotent to do anything much about it.

Vick had given her everything—everything except self-respect, safety and peace—but Vick's ways were not Clint's ways. Clint was neither ruthless nor clever enough. He could only adore Gracie and yearn to help her.

"I wish I could get you away from here—down South some place," he worried.

Gracie hung her stockings over the back of the chair, turned back the blankets, crept shivering into bed.

"We went once—Palm Beach and Miami." Unhappy Clint knew who "we" meant. "It was like summer," Gracie went on, "there was blue water and the sun—and palm trees——"

"They've got palm trees in New Mexico."

On the Air Today

During the vacation absence of John Heiney, Post Radio Editor, his column will be conducted by various Washington radio personalities. Today's guest columnist is Lee Little, production director, WJSV.

Being an expert radio column writer, this will be as simple as falling off the top of the Earle Building, wherein our (WJSV-C. B. S.) studios are located. No, different. In order to write a good radio column, all a person needs is a pair of scissors and a little time to clip such articles as this one about H. V. Kaltenborn, Columbia's political commentator and war correspondent, who went to Europe for a vacation and found himself in the middle of the Spanish Revolution. You will hear him Saturday, atmospheric conditions permitting, at 5 p. m., after a visit to the rebel headquarters at Burgos.

Then there is the story of the radio announcer who was a most unusual salesman. He could sell most anything over the air and his "shows" were crowded with sponsors. He made more money for his station than any other person but he would not obey certain rules and regulations, broke rule after rule, day after day. Finally, in desperation, the production man (than which there is no lower form of radio person), called him in and said, "Sah, you must conduct yourself according to these here now rules and regulations." Said the star announcer, "Nuts." P. M. "I shall be forced to tell the manager." Announcer "More nuts." P. M. "I'm going to his office now, unless you change your attitude." Announcer: "Tell him to jump in the lake." Production man to manager: "Sah, this man is our best and most productive announcer, but he will not obey our rules and regulations. Also, he says, if you don't like it, you can jump in the lake." Manager studies announcer's record very thoroughly, grabs his hat and starts out of the office. P. M. to Manager: "Here! What are you going to do?" Manager: "You can make your own arrangements, I'm going down to the lake." End of story.

The Flying Red Horse Tavern show will be canceled tonight so our listeners will be able to hear President Roosevelt speaking from Chautauqua, N. Y. Clyde Hunt, newly appointed chief engineer for WJSV, will handle the engineering part of the pick-up for Columbia. Bob Trout's many friends in Washington will be glad to know that Bob will handle Columbia's 'mike' on this occasion.

Speaking of engineers. This writer has worked with engineers in a great many radio stations and has observed others in many more. All of which brings us to the fact that the engineering staff at WJSV is the most versatile in the business. For instance, Mahaffey calls himself a 'bar-bell' expert, and you should see him after a short work out, shoulders well back, chest out, stomach held in and, all in all, a perfect figure of a man. The trouble is that it lasts only a couple of hours. Now, Beale without doubt is an expert in the art of handling a bar-bell, in addition to being one of our most capable 'remote' men. A remote man is the engineer who takes over such programs as the Navy Band at 10:15 Tuesday mornings and the Army Band on Friday afternoon. One early morning, after closing the station at 1 o'clock, the two boys were in their room at a local boarding house taking a bit of a workout before retiring. All went well until Beale, a little overzealous, tried to lift something like a hundred and fifty pounds over his head. That he did quite easily, but became overbalanced and Beale and bar-bell fell across the bed. The bed gave way and, needless to say, made quite a noise. The sleepy landlady, surrounded by other roomers who had been awakened by the crash, came to the door and told the boys they would have to do their fighting on the outside hereafter. All of which goes to prove that bar-belling is all right, sometimes.

Warren Sweeney's familiar voice is heard now each week day, excepting Saturday, in a program of news, "Just for The Ladies." He gives news about and for ladies only. The time is 1:15.

A contemplated program will include parts of an amateur nite and a community sing, with bits done by hill-billies, soloists, dramatists and the like. A poll of an audience was taken, regarding auditions for said show and the audience said no auditions; so that will be tried. The show will be very good or very bad. The perpetrator of the idea is Jim McWilliams, otherwise known as Prof. Quiz. The Quiz show, by the way, has caught on like wild fire. It's presented at 8:30 each Saturday nite from the ball room in the Willard Hotel, before an audience of some five hundred people. Most people who attend once keep coming for more. The human race, being what it is, is able to stand a lot of punishment.

Starting next Monday morning, Arch McDonald will be heard doing the Sundial, the reason being Godfrey needs a vacation, two weeks. Don't we all . . . Hugh Connover, back from his two weeks off . . . brown as a couple of berries . . . says he is as fit as a fiddle and feels very ambitious so . . . right away he takes his place in our largest and easiest chair to think things over and . . . falls asleep. Youth will be youth.

Today the Fox Changes Name To the Capitol

Loew Executives Hosts at Rechristening Rites of Famous Playhouse.

Washingtonians arriving downtown today are apt to be caught in a whirlpool of activity in the vicinity of Fourteenth and F streets, and those who come down searching for the Fox Theater may just as well reconcile themselves to the fact that the Fox is no more. In its place now is Loew's Capitol.

The activity may be noticed on the part of many artisans of the theater busily engaged in tearing down every sign bearing the legend "Loew's Fox" and replacing them with new and more ornate markers proclaiming Loew's Capitol.

A crew of five sign technicians worked through the night erecting the huge new Neon sign and it is assured that it will be ready and working when Acting Secretary of War Harry Woodring and Admiral Standley, Acting Secretary of the Navy, "push the button" that will cause F street to blaze with the glare of the new electric identification.

A Distinguished Audience.

Many of the Capital's foremost citizens have promised Loew Chieftain Carter Barron that they will be on hand for the "christening," as well as for the subsequent stage and screen program.

This morning congratulatory telegrams were received from Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy, William Powell, Jean Harlow and the Marx Brothers. Others arrived from well-known local citizens wishing the Capitol well under its new name.

The Metropolitan Police Boys Band will inaugurate the program at 8:15 o'clock, appropriate remarks are expected to be made by the guests of honor, Commissioner Hazen and others who will participate.

WOL will broadcast the program for 30 minutes beginning at 8:15 o'clock, and then all of the excitement will be reported by Art Brown and Arthur Reilly.

Culbertson on Bridge

Fear and Panic.

"Fear" is a greatly maligned word, often confused in meaning with "panic." The first may be a normal, healthy reaction to danger signals, and when under control is apt to be invaluable in averting disaster. Master bridge players are by no means devoid of fear; they fear misfit hands and proceed cautiously when they see signs of one. They fear that their partner may not understand a certain bid, and take the utmost pains to clarify the message. They fear an adverse distribution of cards and use safety plays to circumvent it. Fear thus is turned to excellent account.

"Panic" is a different matter altogether. I can't think of a single useful purpose that it serves. It distorts the vision and beclouds the mind. Had the declarer in today's hand merely feared a bad distribution he could not have lost his slam contract, but his panic was fatal.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	1 spade	2 dia.
3 clubs	Pass	4 hearts	Pass
6 hearts	Pass	Pass	Double
Redouble	Pass	Pass	Pass

West decided that his partner's double of the slam called for an unconventional opening lead, and selected the six of clubs as the most unorthodox he could find. This lead had curious repercussions, as will be seen.

The declarer viewed it with the deepest suspicion and dislike. He could see only one reason for West leading a suit that he himself had bid; it must be, he decided, a singleton. Thus, when he had taken East's club jack with the ace, he hastened to draw trumps. To his disgust he had to lead three rounds when he found that East was void. And then he led dummy's remaining club, and finessed against the queen; West swooped down with his queen, led a diamond, and chuckled fiendishly as the one trick penalty was entered on the score.

Let us examine the hand from the viewpoint of declarer's singleton club obsession. If East really had held the queen jack 9 8 7 of clubs how would declarer's plan have succeeded? After drawing three rounds of trumps and successfully finessing against the remaining club honor, declarer would have left the king 5 2 of clubs to East's queen 9 8. The king would be good, and he could ruff one of the other losers, but there still would be no way of salvaging the fifth club and the losing diamond.

Thus, since the contract could not have been made if the distribution declarer feared had actually existed, obviously it would have been only logical to play for a more favorable break. Trumps should not have been drawn until the club suit was investigated. After winning the first trick with the club ace, declarer should have laid down the king; he then could have ruffed two more rounds if necessary, in the dummy, and, with his superfluity of high trumps, retained rigid control of the trump suit. Twelve tricks then would have become a laydown.

About The Showshops

SO NOW it is official. I mean the opening of the National Theater on Sunday night, September 6, with first Washington presentations of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet."

BELL.

The matter has been tentative for some time, as previously indicated in this space, but it was not until Tuesday night of this week that the final seal of ratification was placed upon playing dates for the principal Eastern cities by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives assembled in solemn conclave in Cleveland, Ohio. Why Cleveland, I don't know, but that is where the boys were. Flying in to Washington by plane direct from the congress of bigwigs late Wednesday, Master Norman Pyle jingled this phone at a midnight hour to spread the glad tidings that all is well for the night before Labor Day at the National. Only a formality, but an important one.

Even so, Washington does not get first crack at "Romeo and Juliet" outside of New York. On Sunday night, August 30, the picture co-starring Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard, with John Barrymore, Edna May Oliver, Basil Rathbone and others of distinction in support, opens a week ahead of the National Capital in Philadelphia, just as was the case with "The Great Ziegfeld." This comes as something less than a hardship to the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the local drayma desks since Mr. Pyle hints that it will make possible another junket to Philadelphia to view the production a week ahead of its local premiere. The "Ziegfeld" party was a tremendous success, even for those who were compelled to catch an early train back immediately after the showing.

No attempt will be made to lure Baltimoreans to Washington for the National engagement of "Romeo," since it will be presented in the Monumental City for a similar run beginning on Sunday, September 20.

Anticipating widespread public interest in this particular essay at transferring Shakespeare to the screen in a manner that will appeal to the student of English dramatic literature as well as to the casual seeker after superlative entertainment, provision has been made by the Loew and M.-G.-M. executives to continue the engagement on E street for a sufficient length of time to enable all who wish to view it to do so under the "road-show" policy of two performances a day with all seats reserved.

The problem presenting itself to those in charge of the road-show "tour" of "Romeo and Juliet" is to get the idea over to the mass public that this picture is not an experiment in classicism, but a celluloid embodiment of one of the greatest and most exciting love stories ever penned—a tragic drama so replete with action and climacteric situations that it virtually presents a perfect motion picture scenario in precisely the form Shakespeare wrote it.

We shall know more about the National's early-season bookings of living drama after the Jack Sharkey-Joe Louis fight in New York next Tuesday night. That is to say, Manager Stephen E. Cochran, of the National, bodyguarded by his sturdy henchman, "Dutch" Kieney, is leaving for the metropolis tonight by motor, primarily to see the fisticuffing. If he happens to think of it in the excitement of the moment, he probably will stop by the Erlanger offices and ask Gus Pitou what has been done along the lines of documenting a few attractions for the National against the coming of cool nights and the closing down of the hot-dog-and-polo-shirt season. When, as and if Mr. Cochran finds out, and it is not a secret, we will pass the word along to you. It should be quite a list.

Just as was the case when "Spring Is Here," the musical comedy starring Ernest Truex, was staged in Washington recently, Gene Ford, director, had the cast and chorus of his fourth annual "Going Native" revue out at the crack of dawn this morning going through their final paces before today's first public presentation of the merry goings-on as stage attraction for the week at Loew's Capitol Theater—nee Fox.

Perhaps "crack of dawn" is a bit on the side of hyperbole, but the boys and girls were up and at it at 6 a. m., with the prospect of four hours of grinding toil before facing those blinding footlights and the thumbs up or down of the cash Caesars sitting out front in the orchestra pews.

This "Going Native" business, of course, is only one of the items that are setting the Loew executives and theater personnel slightly ga-ga today. There is that rechristening ceremony, too. The new 65-foot Neon sign is to be unveiled at 8:30 and all sorts of activities will both precede and follow that important rite. Something in the nature of a vague schedule of events should be discoverable in another column on this page, or the next.

Of prime concern to the starvelings of the drayma desks is the prandial and wholly figurative cracking of champagne bottles over the new Loew's Capitol from within the cloistered parlors of the Variety Club, in the Willard, at 6, with the most resourceful of the Good Samaritans, Division Manager Carter Tate Barron, as host. For the nonce, as I understand it, each occupant of a drama desk becomes a Loew's Capitol, by proxy, and drenches himself in France's sparkling bottled sunshine, on account of because he is expected to be "in the mood" when that string is yanked a little later, over on F street.

It is one of life's perversities and this column's most poignant regrets that the Sabbath theater section makes up at exactly the hour set for the launching!

In all the hurly-burly of the midcity theatrical activities, it is apt to be overlooked that Col. Leonard B. Schloss is quietly setting new all-time records for attendance and general public satisfaction with one of his most successful seasons out at Glen Echo Park. There is a unique combination of diversified elements of mass amusement at Glen Echo which, to the thoughtful, represents the fruition of well-judged years of experience in catering efficiently to the "greatest pleasure of the greatest number." Anyone who can not find something to his liking at Col. Schloss' handsomely appointed amusement center might as well give up trying.

• • • •

6-to-5-and-Take-Your-Choice Note.

Just as you invariably write the old year as part of the date on New Year's Day, it seems sporting to offer at least 11 to 10 that you will still call it "Loew's Fox" until you've been kept after school and made to write "Capitol" on the blackboard 100 times!

Behind the Scenes

Pulpits of the country will decide Sunday the fate of "Dodsworth," in which Mary Astor currently is appearing . . . If the protests from the pulpits are strenuous, the Will H. Hays office will order the scrapping of the film, and Goldwyn will have to remake it . . . Hays, now on the Coast, is in hourly confabs with the film moguls . . . But Sunday will tell the whole story . . . Shuberts, showing smart showmanship in the secret singing of Enrico Caruso, jr., should sign John Steel for the reopening of the Ziegfeld "Follies" . . . He'd be a sensational smash in the "Follies" line-up . . . The day that two of New York's Finest, Detectives John L. Quinn, jr., and Tom Martin, busted the Helen Clevenger killing at Asheville, N. C., Sir Stork delivered a baby daughter to Mrs. Quinn . . . The arrival at St. Mary's Hospital, Brooklyn, was the third girl . . . So Quinn can use the $800 raise which his promotion from second-grade to first-grade detective brings.

MARY BOLAND.

George S. Kaufman, much as he'd like to avoid Broadway at the moment, is due here any minute . . . to confer with Edna Ferber on the casting of "Stage Door," the Margaret Sullavan play which they penned . . . Miss Ferber arrived on the Ile de France.

• • • •

Also aboard were the Bill Gaxtons . . . Mary Boland, in her next Paramount flicker, emerges as the new Marie Dressler of the silver screen . . . They sneaked a preview of the Fred Astaire flicker a few nights ago . . . It is the grandest thing he's ever done, and the Jerome Kern score is somethin' . . . Ken Murray, clicking on the radio, is one of the few native New Yorkers able to please the hinterlands . . . Murray was born on East Fifty-fifth street . . . But raised in Kingston, N. Y. . . . These comedians are doing all right for themselves . . . Cantor, Benny, the Marx Brothers, Fred Allen—all of these are in the higher brackets . . . Victor Moore, who rated $2,000 a week on Broadway stages, is getting $20,000 for five weeks' work on the Coast . . . Moore, this year, will take $100,000 out of Hollywood.

• • • •

Neither George White nor Earl Carroll will be represented on Broadway in the line-up of fall musicals . . . White's "Scandals" are on tour and making dough . . . Carroll has a flicker commitment . . . Shuberts will have two at least, one musical co-starring Beatrice Lillie and Bert Lahr, another marking the return of Ed Wynn to the Broadway boards . . . Max Gordon will sponsor an Evelyn Laye musical . . . Vinton Freedley has the Cole Porter opus in work now . . . Rogers and Hart are preparing words and music for Alex Yokel, and another for Dwight Wiman . . . "White Horse Inn" will move into the Center Theater after $10,000 worth of alterations are completed, including the covering of the pit.

• • • •

Finale of the amusing Walter Wanger-Louis B. Mayer fist fight found Mayer on the floor, with the infuriated Wanger kneeling on his chest and yelling: "Say mamma. Say mamma" . . . So Mayer did that, and the minute he was released, he ran to the office door and summoned the M.-G.-M. studio police.

• • • •

Marc Connelly's percentage deal on "Green Pastures," 30 per cent of the gross, will net him about $750,000 . . . Sam Goldwyn tells pals that Eddie Cantor paid him a pretty penny for his contract release, on Goldwyn's threat to sue . . . Edgar Bergen will be in the new Paradise show . . . Edith Roark is clicking at the Caliente . . . This gorgeous blonde rates applause, for no youngster along the Stem has greater ambition . . . You can't rule 'em off for trying.

Mary Stuart Reigns Second Week

Having achieved one of the most substantial successes of her career on either stage or screen in the title role of RKO-Radio's picturization of Maxwell Anderson's moving drama of "Mary of Scotland," Katharine Hepburn today enters the second week of her notable engagement in the role of Mary Stuart, at RKO-Keith's Theater.

Court Upholds Right To Smoking, Drinking

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 13 (AP).—Judge M. F. Sando, of Orphans' Court, ruled today that cigarette smoking and an occasional indulgence in beer did not make a Hartford, Conn., young man unworthy of a $5,000 bequest left by his great uncle.

Two daughters and five grandchildren of William H. Richmond, wealthy coal operator who died in 1922, contended his will specified that $5,000 should be paid to William Richard Gilliam if he proved to be "worthy." They told the court that Richmond was opposed to the use of intoxicants and tobacco.

Gilliam, a Columbia University medical student, acknowledged he smoked and took a glass of beer on occasion. The court upheld him.

Maintaining high-speed production activity, the Warner Bros.-First National studios in California have completed the first three months' schedule of features for the 1936-37 season. In addition to these, 14 features are currently in work, 9 of them before the cameras and 5 in preparation.

For the first quarter of the new year in the film world, Warners will present 16 fetaures. Washingtonians will be able to see these new productions at the Earle and Metropolitan theaters here. Included in the list are:

"Stage Struck," hailed at a recent preview on the West Coast as one of Warners' sprightliest musicals. Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Warren William, Jeanne Madden, a newcomer, and the Yacht Club Boys, head the cast.

"Cain and Mabel," starring Marion Davies, with Clark Gable, and directed by Lloyd Bacon, based on a story by H. C. Witwer.

"The Case of the Black Cat," with Ricardo Cortez and June Travis. Another in the popular series of stories about Perry Mason, lawyer-sleuth.

"Give Me Your Heart," starring Kay Francis with George Brent, Roland Young and Frieda Inescort, based on the play, "Sweet Aloes," in which Evelyn Laye was seen at the National last season.

"Anthony Adverse," starring Fredric March with Olivia de Havilland and a great cast.

"Polo Joe," starring Joe E. Brown with Carol Hughes.

"Draegerman Courage," with Barton MacLane and Jean Muir.

Among the pictures now shooting are such important productions as "Three Men on a Horse," "Green Light," "Gold Diggers of 1937," "God's Country and the Woman" and "Mistress of Fashion."

Two Jingled Gentlemen Disjoint a Twosome

One of the most amusing scenes in "Piccadilly Jim," opening today on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, is that in which Robert Montgomery, in the title role, and his drinking pal, Robert Benchley, make themselves acquainted with Madge Evans, slightly to the discomfiture of her escort, Ralph Forbes. The incident is a gem of innocuous frivolity, couched in terms of keen wit and brittle badinage. Reading around the clock, the principals pictured above are Ralph Forbes, Miss Evans, Montgomery and the punctilious barfly, Mr. Benchley.

New Gas to Be Used In War Maneuvers

Mustard gas that isn't mustard gas but a harmless vapor that behaves in much the same way as this war-time terror will be used for gas warfare practice in maneuvers this week by the Second Army at Allegan, Mich., the War Department revealed yesterday.

The substitute, it was said, has a pungent odor and leaves a stain that, while washable, still can be distinguished by the umpires of the Army games. It sticks to vegetation for ten hours, while real mustard gas will remain in a treated area for days. The fake product is made of such edibles as corn syrup, glycerine and oil of anise, but Army cooks have been warned not to use it for the morning wheat cakes.

Lieut. Col. B. A. Breckenbury, of the Chemical Welfare Service, who developed the substitute gas, contends that gas warfare is more humane than rifles or shell fire. Victims of mustard gas are put out of commission for three weeks or a month, but they almost all recover, he said.

Mrs. Blanche Noyes Wins Flying Post

Mrs. Blanche Noyes, listed among the first ten women in the United States to receive transport pilots' licenses, has been appointed an air-marking pilot for the Bureau of Air Commerce, Diretcor Eugene Vidal announced yesterday. Her headquarters will be in Washington, Vidal said.

Mrs. Noyes will work in co-operation with three other famous women fliers—Mrs. Louise Thaden, Miss Helen Rickey and Miss Helen MacCloskey. Mrs. Phoebe Omlie, whose husband was killed recently in an airplane crash in St. Louis, is in general charge of the air-marking activities.

All four of the women pilots were in the Capital yesterday conferring with John S. Wynne, director of the airport development section of the Bureau of Air Commerce. They left Bolling Field late yesterday afternoon for their respective posts.

Mrs. Noyes has been flying since 1929. In 1930 she carried John D. Rockefeller, sr., for a ride—his first, and last—although the aged financier professed to have been delighted at the adventure. Mrs. Noyes competed in the transcontinental National Air Races in 1929, during the first year of her flying experience. She was forced down near Waco, Tex., by a fire in the baggage compartment of her plane. After beating out the fire, she resumed flight and, despite the delay, she finished the race in fourth place.

Woman Taxi Operator Cited on Traffic Count

Eva F. Newman, 35, of Hyattsville, Md., one of the few women taxicab operators of the Capital area, was charged with passing a red traffic signal at Ninth and E streets northwest yesterday at the height of rush-hour traffic.

She was taken to the Traffic Division by Policeman H. L. Thompson, the arresting officer, and released to appear in Traffic Court today.

The next morning, however, when Miss Tobin awakens in the same chair she has on a different dress, very noticeable because the jabot had disappeared.

"The Farmer Gets Her Numbers Mixed . . ." Lucille Gleason in the Flicker, "Rhythm on the Range," calls on her niece, Frances Farmer, in the opening scene. Her taxi stops at the Park Ave. apartment, and the number showing is 632. Later in the picture, declares Emily Hartung, Miss Farmer sends a telegram from the West to this same apartment house. But now the number is 711 Park Ave. You know how those motion picture actresses are, always seeking a lucky address.

"There Are Boners—and Boners . . ." "It is surprising," writes Alfred Brown, "that Director Josef von Sternberg, who claims to be an Austrian, pulled the boner he made in the flicker, 'Sins of Man,' featuring Jean Hersholt. The episode in question is a fight scene in a Tyrolean village . . ." Whereupon Mr. Brown goes on to tell how the characters don't fight according to the Austrian style. About this, Mr. Brown may be right. But the picture, "Sins of Man," was not directed by Josef von Sternberg; it was directed by Otto Brower and Gregory Ratoff. Therefore, Alfred Brown sends in a movie boner and commits a fan boner.

Hughes Asks U. S. For Flight Permit

By the Associated Press.

Commerce Department officials revealed yesterday that Howard Hughes, sportsman pilot, had applied for permission to make a foreign flight in his new special plane.

Officials said Hughes had requested that the destination and purpose of his proposed trip be kept secret and that any information concerning the flight must come from him. The permit, they said, has not yet been granted.

Air regulations require that any pilot planning to make a foreign flight must obtain permission from the Commerce Department.

Lions Club Presents Cabin to Boys' Camp

Adam F. Arnold, president of the Lions Club, yesterday presented a cabin on behalf of the club to Camp Letts, Y. M. C. A. boys' camp on Chesapeake Bay.

The presentation followed a track meet for the boys which was won by Fred Riley with a total of 15 points. Arthur Stein and Truxton Houston were tied for second with 13 points each.

In presenting the key to the cabin to Leonard DeGast, executive secretary of the "Y," Arnold said the Lions Club had a deep interest in the welfare of the camp and was anxious to help in any way it could.

Signor Rosso Dinner Heads Social Calendar

Mayflower Party to Be Held Tuesday; Ambassador Troyanovsky to Attend Concert at Watergate This Evening.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Despite the apparent lull in entertaining which summer brings to the Capital, there is still activity in the diplomatic set. Farewell parties for departing envoys and informal gatherings among those who are remaining in Washington take the place of the formal diplomatic dinners, teas and receptions which contribute to the gay winter season.

The dinner being given in honor of the retiring Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, by members of the staff of the Italian Embassy on Tuesday will be at the Mayflower and will be one of the important affairs on next week's social calendar. When the ambassador was entertained in New York at luncheon Wednesday by the Italy-American Society, representatives of civic and cultural groups, as well as business and financial leaders, gathered to do him honor.

The Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Mr. Alexander Troyanovsky, who is spending most of his time at his summer home at Blue Ridge, while Mme. Troyanovsky and their son are touring in the West, expects to return to the capital today to attend the concert at the Watergate this evening with one of the attaches of the embassy.

Mme. Troyanovsky and her son are now in San Diego and will go from there to Los Angeles.

The Cuban Embassy which, it was rumored was to lose its present Ambassador, Dr. Guillermo Patterson, who recently returned from an extended visit in his country, denies that he will leave for another post. Members of his staff declare the rumor is without foundation, and hope it will be a long time before any farewell parties will be in order for him.

The Minister of Ecuador, Senor Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro, who has spent most of the summer here, is visiting West Point for a few days with Senora de Alfaro and their sons. The two older sons are students at West Point, of which their father is a graduate, and the third son is spending his vacation there with his mother at the Pryor Hotel.

The minister will return to the Capital on Sunday.

Members of the legation entertained at a birthday party Wednesday night at the Shoreham Terrace in honor of Senora Mantilla-Ortega, bride of the First Secretary, Senor Don Carlos Mantilla-Ortega, who was celebrating her birthday. Both the orchestra leader and the accordionist at the Terrace took cognizance of the occasion and provided such music as "Happy Birthday" and familiar wedding marches.

Senora Mantilla-Ortega is the former Senorita Lila Hurtado, of Mexico City, whose marriage took place two weeks ago at the Ecuadorean Legation there, with the Minister of Ecuador to Mexico, Gen. Pesantes, acting as best man.

Guests at the dinner Wednesday night included Senor Don Manuel Crespo and Senor Don Adolfo Paez, third secretary of the legation; Mr. Henry Ripalda, of New York City; Mr. Eugene Chebroeux, former commercial attache of the American Embassy in Rio de Janiero, and Senor Raoul Diaz de Marino.

The Venezuelan Legation is looking forward to the arrival of the new minister, Senor Dr. Diogenes Escalante, the last of this month or early in September. He is now in Venezuela and the exact date of his coming has not yet been announced.

Dr. Escalante has been Venezuelan Minister to the Court of St. James since 1915. His wife and daughter are remaining in England for the present and this summer have spent some of their time on the continent. Senorita Escalante was presented at court last season and members of Washington's young social set will welcome her in the Capital as an addition to the attractive group of diplomatic daughters.

Senor Arturo Lares, who is to succeed Senor Pedro Rivero as a new secretary of the legation, is expected to reach Washington some time next week, coming directly from Venezuela.

Lois Jameson Is Betrothed To T. H. Eliot

Announcement Is Made by Mother of Bride-Elect.

Mrs. Theodore Jameson, of Rochester, N. Y., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Lois Jameson, formerly of Rochester and now of Washington, to Mr. Thomas Hopkinson Eliot, general counsel of the Social Security Board.

Miss Jameson is a graduate of Smith College and has been associated with the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom for the past year and a half.

Mr. Eliot, who is a son of the Rev. and Mrs. Samuel A. Eliot, of Cambridge, Mass., is a graduate of Harvard University and of the Harvard Law School. He was appointed to a position in the office of the Solicitor of the Department of Labor in 1933 and last October was named to his present post.

Feted at Dinner on Birthday

the former Senorita Lila Hurtado, of Mexico City, who was guest of honor at a dinner given at the Shoreham Terrace by members of the Legation of Ecuador, of which her husband is First Secretary. Her marriage to Senor Mantilla-Ortega took place in Mexico two weeks ago.

D. C. Resident's Nephew to Wed

A wedding, which will be of interest to friends of the bridegroom in Washington, will take place in Qualicum Beach, British Columbia, tomorrow afternoon, when Miss Shirley Motherwell Davidson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Campbell Davidson, of Qualicum Beach, becomes the bride of Mr. Gordon Kirkpatrick Noble, son of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Noble, of Vancouver.

The bridegroom is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kirkpatrick Noble, of Washington, whom he has visited on several occasions. His most recent visit to the Capital was two years ago. He is a great-grandson of the late Chief Justice Kirkpatrick, of Kingston, Ontario, and a cousin of the late lieutenant governor of Canada, Sir George Kirkpatrick, of Toronto.

Miss Davidson is the granddaughter of the late Sir Charles Peers and Lady Davidson and of the late Canon and Mrs. Thomas Motherwell, of Montreal.

Mrs. T. H. Newberry In Massachusetts

Will Attend Celebration in Tribute to Moody.

Mrs. Truman H. Newberry, wife of the former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, has gone to Northfield, Mass., to attend the religious conference celebrating the 100th anniversary of the birth of Dwight L. Moody, the noted evangelist.

Former Secretary and Mrs. Newberry have a summer home at Watch Hill and leave their home in Grosse Pointe, near Detroit, Mich., early every summer for Watch Hill.

They have been among the summer colony there for a quarter of a century. Near the Newberrys' Watch Hill home is that of Mr. Newberry's brother-in-law and sister, Col. and Mrs. Henry B. Joy, who also have an estate in Grosse Pointe.

Mrs. Joy is well known in Washington, as she was a frequent guest of her brother and sister-in-law when they lived here.

Mr. F. W. Ford To Take Bride

Washington is interested in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Suzanne Humphreys, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Landon Humphreys, of Far Hills, N. J., to Mr. Frederick Ward Ford, son of Mrs. Frederick Ward Ford, of Morristown, and the late Mr. Ford.

Miss Humphreys is the granddaughter of the late Mr. Walter B. Fairfield, of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, who lived in Washington for many years. She is descended from Col. David Humphreys, aid de camp to Gen. Washington, her great great-grandfather was Richard Cutts, whose wife was a sister of Dolly Madison.

Washington Society Notes

The former Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Jefferson Coolidge are at their summer home at Swampscott, Mass. On Wednesday night they entertained at dinner for their house guest, Miss Eleanor Hill, of San Francisco, who visited them several times in Washington. Among the other guests were Miss Anne Howard, Miss Olivia Ames, Miss Phyllis Tucker and Miss Camilla Warren, Mr. Brinley M. Hall, Mr. John Calloway, Mr. Robert H. Gardiner, jr., Mr. John C. Storey and Mr. Robert Dryadale.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

More Correspondents Write Their Reactions to Problem Presented by "Twenty-Three;" Woman Offers to Care for Child During Day, Free of Charge.

On August 3 this column carried a letter from an unmarried mother of a 5-year-old son, who has posed as a widow and now wonders if she should tell her fiance the truth about her past. Signing herself "Twenty-Three," she explained that she has an allowance of $300 a month from her baby's father, maintains an attractive apartment, a car and a maid and cuts quite a social figure in the town where she has been living for two years. The two letters that follow are among those that have been received since "Twenty-Three" presented her problem here.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to tell you how I solved a problem similar to the one described by "Twenty-Three" recently. First of all, I knew of the child before I married the mother. Soon after our wedding I filed a declaration of acknowledgement of parentage. Who could question my motives or my declaration? The boy's father was dead. What neighbors said did not worry me. What relatives said did bother me, but since I am considered "out of the ordinary," they took it for granted I knew what I was doing.

• • • •

We have been married 15 years. The boy admires me and consults me in most of his planning. I have never treated him other than as my own son—which I feel he really is. Stepsons are problems, as a rule, only when they are called "stepsons."

• • • •

My marriage license said "first marriage" for both myself and my wife. I don't think the boy has any need to worry about what may come to light later on. He is accepted as my son. Environment and close association have developed traits in the boy similar to my likings and dislikes. The boy resembles his mother. The thing to worry about is not so much who the child is, as I see it, but what the parents are. I am proud when the big boy comes to me with his innermost secrets and says, "Dad, I'm asking your advice because we always manage to figure things out."

• • • •

My wife and I have two children of our own. We had another child—a girl whom we adopted while we were away from home, working in another city. She considered us as her own parents, and no one knew otherwise. Her death certificate indicates that she was our child. The three children we have now—our two, and my adopted one—have made us very happy. We have forgotten the past

A HAPPY FATHER.

A Splendid Solution.

DEAR HAPPY FATHER: You are to be congratulated upon the admirable way in which you have solved your problem and found happiness as a husband and father. Your letter is printed with the hope that "Twenty-Three" and her fiance will be encouraged to follow your example.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The best advice I can offer "Twenty-Three" is for her to remain single and live happily ever after on her allowance of $300 a month. This is probably much more than she would ever receive from her fiance, provided any such person exists. Only the most gullible person would believe her fantastic story.

• • • •

She certainly used singular judgment at the tender age of 18 when she went to a distant city to have her baby and returned to her home and parents with a story of having obtained a divorce. Her episodes will probably put a few unwholesome ideas into the minds of some of her elders. She might do well to start writing for a confession magazine. There are many who would enjoy reading of her experiences and would doubtlessly hail her as an ideal. ARTURO.

May Interest Many.

DEAR ARTURO: Whether the story related by "Twenty-Three" was based on fact of fancy, I cannot say. In attempting to solve her problem the writer of this column took the letter at face value and answered it accordingly. While your advice to the unmarried mother is obviously ironic, I have printed it because it may be interesting not only to "Twenty-Three" but to a number of readers who were skeptical about her story.

Expert Decries Tale-Bearing By Children

Home Where Spying Is Countenanced Held Unhappy in Long Run.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THERE is no more unpleasant atmosphere than the atmosphere of a house where the children are permitted to tell on each other. There are parents who will even go so far as to encourage tale-bearing.

When Susie Jones was put to bed for disobedience, Mr. Jones sent her brother Frank to spy out the land and see if Susie was really in bed.

With some parents, it is sheer laziness which makes them permit the practice. Others feel that by means of spies they can obtain a more intimate knowledge of their children's actions, and keep them out of mischief. They imagine, furthermore, that the child who knows that he is spied upon probably will be more circumspect in his behavior.

Any teacher who permitted tale-bearing, or acted upon information received by this means would soon find himself thoroughly disliked by all his pupils, and the child who told would be an object of scorn and contempt to his comrades. It is apt to be the same in the home.

A home where spying is countenanced is in the long run pretty sure to be unhappy. The children distrust each other and eventually distrust their parents, too. There is no securtiy in such a home, no privacy; and children need a sense both of security and of privacy.

There may be occasions when a child is risking his life or safety or the life and safety of others, when tale-bearing is permissible. But such occasions are rare. As a general thing, it is well to discourage the tell-tale and never to act on the information he gives.

What the parents do not know probably will not hurt them. Children who feel that they are trusted are apt to be more worthy of trust than those who live in an atmosphere of suspicion.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Henna an Ancient Dye.

When a woman starts to alter the shade of her hair she must remember that she is "in for it," that the practice must be kept up, and that it demands a large amount of time as well as considerable expense. It means "touching up" at least once a month with exactly the same material and shades often are difficult to match. The peculiar purplish or greenish casts that sometimes result are anything but attractive.

The two most commonly used metals are salts of lead or silver. Lead is the active ingredient in many so-called "tonics," and through its use the hair gradually darkens. The solution is applied ordinarily with a comb or brush, and as the applications continue the hair changes; if it is pure white, first to yellow, then brown, finally black. While there are but few authenticated cases of lead poisoning due to such a dye, yet occasionally one will develop. Pyrogallic acid and a soluable silver salt will turn the hair from gray to light brown and then to black, depending upon the strength of the solution.

Henna is a vegetable dye obtained from Egyptian privet and may be combined with indigo to obtain "hennarang." Through combinations of these two tints variations from light brown to blue black may be obtained. When henna is used alone on gray hair it produces a reddish effect.

The most harmful dye is known as paraphenoldiamine, which is likely to bring about an inflammation of the scalp (dermatitis). In fact, the enire face may become blotchy, red, swollen and covered with pimples or watery blisters. In severe cases the eyes cannot be opened, and the lips and mouth may be so swollen that speaking and swallowing are difficult. Although the skin irritation usually subsides in a few days, the kidneys may be affected and the inflammation of these organs may last for weeks or even months. Poisoning from this source is possible through the wearing of artificial hair which has been dyed, or from contact with furs colored with this particular chemical.

After all, dyes for the hair are a nuisance and other than henna cannot be recommended. Beautifully dressed hair, in its natural tones, is the best answer from the standpoint of health.

Knit Suits Follow the Dress-Up Mode

DUE TO THE ingenunity of clever designers, knitted frocks for the fall and winter seasons, are fashioned with the same dexterity and style as costumes of silk or sheer wool. At a recent knit fashion show in New York, frocks, coats and suits of all varieties and to meet all occasions were displayed by the mannequins. From the most casual daytime ensembles to sophisticated evening gowns, they were all amazingly chic, and in a number of instances, the yarns were so smartly manipulated, one could scarcely believe they belonged to the knit family.

All of the high fashion colors and textures have been expressed in yarn, and there isn't a single style detail that hasn't been adapted to this medium. A knitted costume, according to the oncoming season pre-views, now goes everywhere and is on a par with the most pretentious silk frock. Beginning with active sports, knits have finally landed in the smartest restaurants and most formal ballrooms. The evolution has been gradual but sure, and now has a definite place in the fashion picture.

Canned Foods Fixed in Urban Life

Economics Director Finds Cooking Art, However, Is Undiminished.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN Grandma was a girl, the bride who "cooked out of a can" was considered a poor excuse for a homemaker.

"No wonder Jim's so skinny," neighbors commented in funeral tones, with significant head shaking. "Helen never gets a meal without using her can opener. A man who works as hard as Jim needs fresh, nutritive food." • • • "Helen says her grocery bill is simly out of bounds this month. I'm not auprised, considering all those canned things she has been buying."

The clever little woman in those days used fresh vegetables and fruit and meat in season, tried to can enough at home to carry her through the rest of the year and prided herself on using food out of "store-bought cans" only in case of emergency.

Can Comes Into Own.

But today, the can has come into its own, and the modern bride, her mother and even Grandma have discovered it's smart to use the can-opener every day.

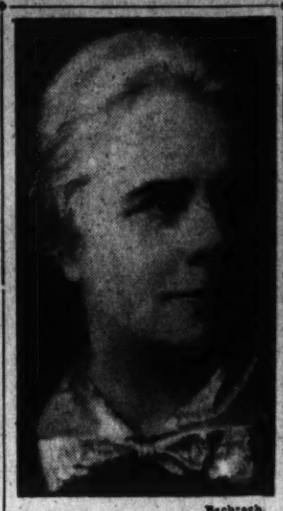
So thinks Miss Ruth Atwater, director of Home Economics for the National Canners Association, who recently returned from a trip to the West Coast where she attended the home economics convention in Seattle and the nurses' convention in Los Angeles, and delivered a number of lectures before women's groups in several States.

From her contacts with housewives throughout the country and her work with the National Canners Association, Miss Atwater has found that "canned food has met the demands in city life and has taken the drudgery out of housekeeping in many rural and urban households.

"Yet it has not in any sense destroyed the art of cooking," she explained yesterday at her office. "Treasured old family recipes are just as applicable to canned as to unprepared food; and the modern housewife knows that she can put as much imagination and culinary skill into dishes planned on a canned-product basis as her grandmother did in using raw foods entirely."

Defends Food Value.

Discussing whether it is cheaper to use canned or unprepared food, she stressed that the actual cost depends on many factors—the season, the market and the waste involved. "The housewife who must watch her pennies should shop on a comparison basis and find out whether it is more economical to buy corn in the can or in the bulk, tomatoes prepared or unprepared, beets cooked or uncooked," she said. "But she must also take into consideration the fuel, the time, the energy and the waste of both types of products before she can be sure she is saving money."



Bachrach.

MISS RUTH ATWATER, home economist, explains how the modern housewife can be a better buyer.

The prejudice against canned food on the score that it has less nutritive value than unprepared food has no foundation in fact, according to Miss Atwater. "Scientific research carried on through a number of years has proved that the food value of canned products is equal to that of any cooked food," she averred. "In every element of quality—in vitamins, safety, purity and wholesomeness—canned foods meet every comparison with cooked food of any kind whatever."

Mentioning ways in which the housewife can get her money's worth and save time and energy, Miss Atwater gave these suggestions:

1. Plan meals carefully on a budget basis so you will know what you want and how much you can spend when you go to market.

2. Buy food with the specific use in mind. For example, get crushed pineapple for ice cream, pineapple circles or spears for salad; very tender peas for salads or garnishing, average-size peas for stewing or creaming or using in a casserole, more mature ones for soups and souffles.

3. Read the labels carefully, many canners are now following the descriptive-labeling plan which recognizes the importance of describing separately the characteristics of the product, such as size, tenderness, color and sweetness.

4. Take into consideration that variety that can be provided with canned foods in any season.

5. Remember that everything in a can is edible; that canned food can be purchased quickly and easily and can be prepared in a minimum of time, and that it takes up little storage space, keeps without refrigeration and makes meal planning easy.

Farley Appeals For Minnesota Party Harmony

Urges Truce by Factions; Holt to Be Inactive, State Leaders Say.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—Chairman James A. Farley today appealed to Democratic leaders in Minnesota to lay aside their differences and work for re-election of President Roosevelt.

After a conferenc with State Chairman John F. D. Meighen, Farley announced Meighen would be in charge of the campaign in Minnesota and said he had asked other leaders to co-operate with him.

"It is requisite," Farley said, "that a harmonious organization be perfected within the Democratic ranks to enable Minnesota to give its electoral vote to President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner in November.

"I would appreciate it if every element within the Democratic Party will put aside any differences, if any exist, and work wholeheartedly with Judge Meighen and his campaign committee to the end that the result on November 3, 1936, will surpass that very splendid one in 1932."

Sees Roosevelt Triumph.

Meighen, who attended Farley's press conference, said the differences between the party leaders would not prevent President Roosevelt from carrying the State.

Other Minnesota leaders were scheduled to confer with the national chairman tomorrow.

West Virginia Democratic leaders expressed the belief Senator Rush D. Holt, critic of some of the Administration's activities, would not take an active part in the campaign, despite his past differences with Senator Matthew M. Neely, who is running for re-election.

State Leaders Confer.

This opinion was voiced by State Chairman R. C. Andrews and by Mrs. Douglas W. Brown, national committeewoman, who conferred with Farley along with leaders from Kentucky, Delaware, Tennessee and South Carolina.

Holt, a Democrat, will deliver the keynote address at the convention of the National Union for Social Justice, at Cleveland, tomorrow.

"Our opinion," Andrews said, "is that Senator Holt will not be active in this campaign in West Virginia."

He declined to expand on this statement.

Mrs. Brown said "Senator Holt will have no effect on the campaign."

Operation Needed, Youth's KinHunted

Kansas City, Aug. 13 (AP).—Ten-year-old Tommy Dunklin pouted in disgust from his sick bed today while friends and relatives sought his vacationing parents to obtain permission to operate on the boy.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Dunklin, were believed motoring in Wisconsin or Michigan, but efforts to locate them by letter, wire and radio have failed.

When they departed last week they left the home, Tommy and two younger children in charge of a young maid, Miss Hazel Simpson. Then Tommy became ill with appendicitis. Five physicians agreed an operation was necessary, but they must have the parents' consent.

"Why make such a fuss about appendicitis," blustered Tommy, as he lay in bed, his pain relieved by ice packs.

Attending physicians reported that unless something unexpected develops, the boy "may be tided over this attack." But they added that the need for a decision on whether to operate still remained "acute."

Ann Hewitt Is Secluded As Doctors' Trial Opens

San Francisco, Aug. 13 (AP).—Petite Ann Cooper Hewitt, heiress to a fortune etsimated as high as $10,000,000, secluded herself from curious spectators today as prosecutors strove for a woman-dominated jury to try two physicians accused of sterilizing her.

The physicians, Dr. Samuel G. Boyd and Dr. Tilton E. Tillman, together with Miss Hewitt's mother, Maryon Cooper Hewitt, are accused of conspiracy to commit mayhem in an alleged plot to deprive the heiress of motherhood, thereby tightening the mother's hold on the fortune.

McShain Co. To Construct U. S. Building

Treasury Official Says Work May Begin in Week or So.

Remaining Property Is Being Acquired for Structure.

Work on the addition to the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, which came to a sudden halt 11 days ago when the construction company surrendered its contract, will get under way again in a week or so, Edward R. Witman, of the Treasury's Procurement Division, said yesterday.

He expects the same contractors, John McShain, Inc., of Philadelphia, to pick up the work where they left it, he said. The contract was surrendered when the Government failed to take over all the land necessary for building operations within a specified time.

According to the contract the lots between Twelfth, Fourteenth, C and D streets southwest, were to be vacated by August 5, but on that date 16 parcels remained in private ownership.

"Some of the titles to the property are so involved we had to take time to go to court in order to secure the land," Witman explained yesterday. He believes these difficulties, along with condemnation proceedings in a few cases, will be accomplished within the next few days.

Part Indian Held Stubborn.

One of the most stubborn property holders, the construction company said, is the Rev. King Blackwell, a part Cherokee, who maintains a printing shop in a wooden shack on Thirteenth street, which he purchased three years ago at a tax sale.

Blackwell, who has had a sign in his window for six weeks warning those who break into his place that they "may run into a trap and get shot," has complained that the Government has never made him an offer for his property.

Witman said yesterday that negotiations were going forward, however, with the last owners of the place, since Blackwell holds only a tax title.

Another resident of the area who still is living in his house, although all the neighboring ones have been razed, is William F. Adams, jr. In the rear of his two-story brick dwelling he has an automobile repair shop and had brick unloaded to build a garage when the clearing of the lots began.

Holds Price Too Low.

Adams, who has six children, explained yesterday that he will be out of a job when he moves, since his repair customers are Government employes who work in surrounding Government buildings. He considered the price the Treasury Procurement Division offered him several weeks ago too low, and is now waiting until his property is condemned.

William H. Abbott, 77, who received $12,000 for his two-story brick house on Fourteenth street two months ago, still is in the process of moving. He said yesterday he would get out when he was given the final word by Witman, which he expects "any day now." The Treasury Department's agents say he already has received several notices to vacate.

Abbott's possessions consist largely of newspapers, magazines and books containing articles about pineapples, a fruit he considers beneficial in the treatment of almost any ailment. He says he drinks about 3 quarts of pineapple juice a day, using the liquid instead of water in cooking, and that it helps cure everything from palsy to anemia.

"After I leave here I'm going to Hawaii with my daughter and raise pineapples for the rest of my life," he said. Already about eight truckloads of information concerning the fruit have been carted out of his house, where a portion of the Printing and Engraving addition will soon be built.

Is Everybody Riding Bicycles? Post Want Ad Sells Another One!

Last Tuesday, Mrs. Charles Latimer, of 3901 Fulton St. N.W., sold a bicycle through a Post Want Ad—and could have sold 11 more through the same ad. On Wednesday, we tipped you off in this space that now is the time to sell bicycles through Post Want Ads. Mrs. I. Chaney, of 3812 Wilmon Place, took the tip and inserted this ad in Thursday's Post—

She sold the bicycle early Thursday morning — and could have sold 3 more before noon the same day. "It certainly pays to advertise," said Mrs. Chaney. Whether you have a bicycle or old furniture to sell, you'll find that it does pay to advertise in Post Want Ads. The cost is small. Call

Garfield Playground Brings Back Its Youngsters of Past

The preliminary to choosing sides for a ball game had the same appeal for the men who attended Garfield Playground's home-coming. Ray Fitzgerald (le ft) and Phil Nevitt are the choosers. The women swinging—they are sisters—are Mrs. Robert O'Connor, Mrs. William E. Belt and Mrs. Gene Richards.

Men, Women Frolic as of Old At Garfield Playfield Reunion

Men and women who romped as children at Garfield Playground gathered there again yesterday for a reunion planned by the director, Mrs. Evelyn Sheridan, who knew most of them when they spent their afternoons in the wading pool and swings.

Known to two generations of children at Garfield as "Miss Susie," the youthful appearing director began receiving her guests in the middle of the afternoon and by 5 p. m. a game of schlag and a round of baseball were in full swing.

Some of the men arrived late and some were kept away altogether at the last minute by business affairs. Dr. Sam Zola, an interne at Providence Hospital, had planned to be on hand at the beginning, but just as he was starting out for the playground he was called to the hospital to dress an injured hand.

Two priests, Francis Cowhig and Francis Cornell, who used to be among Miss Susie's boys, also had planned to attend. But the latter was unable to get away from his parish in Baltimore and the former, who was ordained in Rome last spring, was called to Baltimore on affairs of the church.

Among those at the reunion were Ed Colliflower, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; Pete Haley, former Georgetown University football star; Howard Smith, of the Metropolitan police force; Bill Lilly, of the Potomac Electric Power Co., and Eddie Langley, of the Government Printing Office.

Acting as master of ceremonies was Richard Tennyson, in charge of boys' work for the Playground Department, who was director at Garfield 18 years ago. Miss Susie came there 14 years ago.

Among the women who attended the reunion were three sisters, now married and with children of their own, but who lived near Garfield and played there in their childhood. They were Mrs. Walter E. Belt, of 5205 Fifth street northwest, with her four children, Walter, Robert, Mary Ellen and Patsy; Mrs. Robert M. O'Connor, of 264 Sixteenth street southeast, with little Bobby and Shirley Mae, and Mrs. Gene Richards, of 733 Sixth street southeast.

Those who once played on Miss Susie's ball team and who limbered up in a game of schlag yesterday were Dorothy Kelso, Rena and Ellen Burnam, Loveye Adkins, Mary Kelso, Anna and Lena Vito, Mrs. Raymond Webber, Mrs. Bruce Kessler, Mrs. William Gibson, Mrs. Raymond Orndorff, Elizabeth O'Rourke and Margaret and Helen Breen.

Early Workers On Building Job Get Arrested

Regulations Prohibit Such Labor Prior to 7 A. M. in the District.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday revealed a report from Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, on the arrest of seven workmen who were on the job at 5:30 a. m., when the District regulation prohibits activity by builders before 7 a. m. In calling for the report, Hazen observed:

"It seems to me that the better procedure would have been to notify the contractor before taking such drastic action."

Maj. Brown reported that following receipt of complaint at the Sixth Precinct station two privates went to Ninth street and Concord avenue northwest and found seven men at work on a new building.

They were arrested and required to deposit $5 collateral each. Subsequently six of them were fined $10 in Police Court, the seventh failing to appear for trial.

"Many complaints of this nature were received of contractors violating this regulation," Maj. Brown said. "Since these arrests were made (July 16) no complaint has been received."

Operation of a Lottery Laid to Local Women

Yetta Goldberg, 43, of 1142 Sixth street northwest, was charged with operating a lottery yesterday after her arrest in a grocery store at the Sixth street address for allegedly accepting "numbers" bets.

The woman was taken before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage for a hearing. Vice Squad police testified they seized a number of alleged "numbers" slips and marked money.

Legal Opinion On Jaywalkers' Curb Is Likely

Experts Call Regulation Too Broad; Corporation Counsel Unconsulted.

The jaywalking curb proposed by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer may be submitted to the corporation counsel's office for an opinion before action is taken by the District Commissioners, it appeared yesterday.

Although it is indorsed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, the suggested regulation was called too broad yesterday by legal experts in unofficial opinions.

The regulation, which reads, "No pedestrian shall disobey the instructions of a police officer," might be made to cover almost any police instruction, and probably could not be sustained in court, it was said.

The corporation counsel's office once before has opposed the adoption of a ban on jaywalking until more safeguards are provided pedestrians at street intersections. E. Barrett Prettyman was then counsel.

Elwood H. Seal, present corporation counsel, said yesterday the proposed regulation had not been submitted to him for an opinion as to its legality.

George E. Allen, who has consistently opposed all suggested jaywalking regulations, will not be at the Commissioners' meeting today when the proposal is considered. He is out of the city.

Mystery

'Counterfeiter,' Report of Shooting Puzzle Police.

Police at headquarters and at two precinct stations were in an uproar yesterday trying to catch a counterfeiter and also trying to locate a policeman reported shot.

It all started from telephone calls received at headquarters. The first caller said he was a clerk in a downtown bank and was holding a counterfeiter.

Two scout cars and a Detective Bureau cruiser responded. Employes of the bank were surprised. They had made no such call.

Ten minutes later an excited citizen told the police switchboard operator a policeman had just been shot in the 700 block of T street northwest. A squad from headquarters and the usual number of scouts responded. Again they found nothing.

The mysterious caller was smart enough not to call again so the call could be traced. The police are still checking.

2d Precinct Gives Police Cell Problem

Inadequate Building Is Result of Glassford Consolidation.

Prisoners Crowd Jail, Many Being Unable to Sleep for Days.

This is the first of a series of articles pointing out the lack of facilities and causes of overcrowding in certain of the police precinct stations.

By Bill Richardson.

A consolidation of the Second and Eighth police precincts, when Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford was superintendent, has ever since given the department one of its greatest problems.

And now Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown hopes that the next Congress will provide funds to end that problem so that overcrowding in a 50-year-old building, which was more than antiquated when it was serving as the station for only the Eighth Precinct, will be ended.

The present Second Precinct begins at K street. Its eastern boundary is Second street northeast, its northern limit, Euclid street, and its western line, Fifteenth street. It probably encompasses the most densely populated section of the city.

Most Crimes.

More crimes are committed, more persons arrested, more violators sought in the Second Precinct than in any other part of the city. This is why on most Saturday nights as many as 60 prisoners have to be transferred to other precincts—there isn't enough room in its eight cells, each with one bed, although as many as six men are crowded into each before the transferring is begun.

During Glassford's administration the same situation was created by the consolidation of the Fourth and Fifth Precincts. But this was soon remedied by a return to the former set-up. A change, however, is not so easy in the Second Precinct because the old Second Precinct station on Fifth street between M and N streets is now used by the Police Women's Bureau, which has its administrative headquarters and detention rooms there.

It was not Saturday last night at the Second Precinct station, but in one cell, in which there was only one bed, there were three men. Richard Williams was one of the men. He knew nothing about Maj. Brown's fight for new quarters for the Police Department. But he said he did know he hadn't slept since Sunday night because:

"No Place to Sleep."

"There's no place to sleep."

He pointed to the floor. The other men said it was hard to sleep, too. From Sunday night to Thursday night is a long time to go without sleep.

There is the record room. It is on the second floor with no windows. It is also musty. There are rats in the record room.

The locker room is on the third floor and it is better than most of the other rooms. The walls there had a bath recently.

The front room, first floor, is best of all. The furniture there is only about as old as the Civil War.

T. R. Haage said the filing cabinets were donated by the Government—after they got too old for the Government to use.

"The whole building is inadequate," said Capt. L. E. Bobo. When policemen rode bicycles in Washington Capt. Bobo was one of them. That's how long he's been on the force.

"It would have been all right years and years ago," he said. "But it isn't now. This is the hardest section in town as far as police are concerned. We have more prisoners and we have no place to put them.

"We've got to have more room and cleaner quarters."

Crowding at Second Precinct Station

Sprinkler Driver Cleared in Death

James Windham, 35, of 1716 North Capitol street, driver of a street sprinkler truck, was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday in the traffic death of Armand Douglas Knowlton, 5, of 212 Fourteenth street northeast.

The boy died instantly under the wheels of the heavy truck Wednesday when he slipped on the street while running alongside.

Witnesses said the truck driver and his helper, John J. Kelly, 1105 Holbrook terrace northeast, who was also relieved of responsibility, had warned a group of children not to paddle along beside the truck in the wet spray, but the Knowlton boy was not seen in the group. The accident occurred in front of the boy's home.

Poliomyelitis Expert Talks To Kiwanians

Dr. Leake Asserts First Recorded Epidemic Was in 1840.

Little-known facts about poliomyelitis, which annually breaks out in epidemic form in one or more parts of the United States and kills and disables thousands, were described to Washington Kiwanians yesterday by Dr. James P. Leake, medical director of the Public Health Service.

He pointed out:

That one of the earliest world-renowned celebrities known to have suffered from the disease was Sir Walter Scott, novelist and poet, who died in 1832.

That infantile paralysis is an erroneous popular name for poliomyelitis, since the affliction attacks adults as well as babies and children and does not always paralyze.

That the first recorded epidemic of poliomyelitis, to the best of his knowledge, occurred in the United States in 1840. The place was Louisiana, and there were 11 cases. Fragmentary evidence exists, said Dr. Leake, that there may have been an epidemic six or eight years earlier in the vicinity of Pittsburgh.

That the disease is more prevalent and strikes more persons in the North, although the filterable virus which is the culprit is more widespread in the South. The probable explanation of this paradox, Dr. Leake declared, is that Southerners possess stronger immunity.

One of the country's leading epidemiologists, Dr. Leake has made an intensive study of the disease and his aid has been sought by health officers from Massachusetts to California in making diagnoses.

Although the epidemic, now on the wane, in northern Alabama and several counties in Mississippi and Tennessee took many lives and incapacitated hundreds of adults and children, the outbreak was not intense from an epidemiological standpoint, Dr. Leake said.

Of the alum-pieric acid spray, developed by the Public Health Service and given its first test as a preventative during the Alabama outbreak, Dr. Leake said:

"I hardly think any accurate data can be obtained on its effectiveness. To receive a fair trial, the spray should be administered by a physician. Down there it was used rather indiscriminately and it will be difficult to tell what effect it had.

"We think, nevertheless, that the solution is most promising."

Bolstered Nats Open Red Sox Series Today

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 13.—Eager to win their third consecutive series, the Nats do battle tomorrow with the Boston Red Sox in the first contest of a four-game series. Another single game will be played Saturday, followed by a double-header on Sunday.

Although buttressed by the return of both Joe Kuhel and Cliff Bolton to the lineup, the Senators will have to undergo the ordeal of facing Lefty Grove in tomorrow's tilt. The great lefthander, whom Washington has a penchant for beating, will be opposed by Pete Appleton, who has won his last two starts and who said tonight he was going to make it three in a row.

Kuhel and Bolton worked out a short while yesterday at the Yankee Stadium and while still somewhat handicapped are too close to their top form to leave on the bench. Kuhel was hurt in the last Boston series in Washington, when Grove spiked him on a close play at first base. Bolton suffered a split finger on the last Western trip and has been out more than a fortnight.

Bucky Harris could not decide tonight what to do about Cecil Travis, who performed well on second base in the Yankee series. If the big youngster slaps the ball well in batting practice tomorrow, Harris probably will leave him at second and bench Red Kress, who has been playing first in Kuhel's absence.

Cox Is Stopped; Managoff Is Winner

By Bill McCormick.

The blow that felled Kansas City Kitty Cox long enough for Ivan to clamber on his recumbent form while Referee Cyclone Burns tolled 1-2-3, was a right to the chin delivered in a moment of exasperation. The exasperation, which was felt not alone by Managoff but by most of the 1,200 customers, was occasioned by the doity, doity, crude tactics employed by Cox.

The affair started as peacefully as a gangsters' conference and wound up as full of fight as a convention of anti-war advocates. After the boys had exhausted their repertoire of holds, they started tossing and booting each other out of bounds.

Then they started slapping each other around, with Managoff doing his slapping with the open hand and elbow, which is permissible under the rules of wrestling—if any—and Cox smacking Ivan with clenched fist. When Joe finally started kicking Managoff, Ivan decided he had enough of the one-sided game of "knock, knock," so he let Cox have it. The finish came after 36½ minutes.

In a 30-minute preliminary, Ole Anderson was awarded a peculiar post-mortem award over Joe Dusek. The boys had labored to a draw and Referee Bennah Bortnick had raised both their hands as an indication of the stalemate. Ole went to shake hands with Dusek, but Joe being no gentleman, kicked him in the brisket. Whereupon Bortnick reversed his decision and held aloft the arm of Anderson, as a signal that he had won—and who cares?

In other 30-minute preliminaries Henry Piers tossed Al Billings and Cliff Olson flopped Firop Wilcox.

Giants Win, 6-4; 3 Games Out Of Lead

Phils Bow as New Yorkers Take Tenth of Last Eleven Tilts.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—The Giants climbed up to three games off the National League pace today by nosing out the Phillies, 6 to 4, for the tenth win in their last 11 starts.

A three-run rally in the fifth, with homers by Jim Ripple and Travis Jackson accounting for the run-making, put the game on ice for Lefty Al Smith, although he gave up 14 hits to the 9 the Giants collected.

The defeat was the eleventh straight for the Phillies and sank them deeper into the National League cellar.

With the first and second place Cardinals and Cubs idle, the victory boosted the Giants to two games back of second place and three away from the Gas House Gang.

Singles by Sam Leslie, Jackson and Smith brought in the first two Giant runs off Joe Bowman in the second, and Dick Bartell's single, Smith's walk and Joe Moore's base hit added another in the fourth. The three-run rally in the fifth wound up the New York scoring.

Pirates Win Over Cincinnati Reds

Pittsburgh, Aug. 13 (AP).—Waite Hoyt, making his first start since an operation forced him to the sidelines back in the early weeks of May, pitched seven-hit ball today as the Pirates nosed out the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 4.

The Pirates opened the scoring in the first, Fred Schulte tripling and coming home on an infield out. A triple and three singles added two more runs in the third. Hoyt doubled and was brought home by Fred Schulte's hit in the fourth, and the winning run came in the seventh when Paul Waner drove Schulte across with a two-bagger.

U. S. Quintet Plays Canada in Finals

Berlin, Aug. 13 (AP).—The United States and Canada today qualified for the finals of the Olympic basketball tournament, America by beating Mexico, 25-10, and Canada by thumping Poland, 42-15.

The American team, whose play had been marked until today by a whirlwind offense, had trouble in working through the Mexico defense in the semifinal, but showed that it had a defense of its own by holding the Mexicans without a field goal in the first half, which ended with the United States leading, 13-2.

Lewis and Wycoff Draw.

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Ed (Strangler) Lewis and Lee Wycoff, picked by the New York State Athletic Commission to settle rival wrestling "trust" differences, battled to a draw at the opening of the Hippodrome as an athletic center tonight. They both were counted out on the floor outside the ring after 2 hours 14 minutes 45 seconds of wrestling without once going to the mat.

2 U. S. Boxers Enter Olympic Semifinals; 2 Are Eliminated

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 13.—America's Olympic ring forces encountered only 50-50 success in the boxing quarter-finals today.

Lou Laurie, flyweight, and Jackie Wilson, bantamweight, both of Cleveland, represented United States successes, beating Sobkowiak, of Poland, and Larazabul, of the Philippines.

Ted Kara, another Clevelander, lost his quarterfinal featherweight bout by a decision to Catteral, of South Africa, and Andrew Scrivani, Chicago lightweight, was outpointed by Agrin, of Sweden, in one of the American boy's best fights of the Olympic tournament.

They traded uppercuts in the middle of the round, and then Laurie landed a hard punch to the European's nose, which bled for the rest of the fight.

Wilson stunned Larazabal with a terrific left to the jaw as the bout opened, but the Filipino came in and took a quick hook at Wilson. The Clevelander took the punch and snapped back the Islander's head with a quick uppercut, then followed in, battering Larazabal against the ropes. So weak was the Islander after this flurry that a light grazing punch dropped him to the floor.

He took a nine count and then scrambled halfway up. Wilson was on him and crossed a one-two to the jaw. Again the Islander went down. This time when he got up he was utterly defenseless, and the referee led him to his corner.

Ted Kara, the other Clevelander in the quarter-finals, was eliminated when he lost a decision to Catteral, of South Africa.

From the beginning o the first round both exchanged heavy blows, the Swede concentrating on uppercuts. In the beginning Scrivani succeeded in avoiding the disastrous punches and battered his opponent's face with stiff lefts and right hooks.

The Swede seemed fresher in the final heat. While the American pursued him for a chance to deliver a knockout blow, Agrin sidestepped and danced around, landing effective counter blows which rocked Scrivani and took the judges' eyes in the close finish.

Kara, holding his fight protectively in front of his chin, opened his fight against Catteral with a long jab to the face, but encountered a man with a longer reach. The South African's aggressiveness and cleaner punching gave him the lead in the first two rounds.

The American, in face of apparent defeat, launched a vigorous body and head attack, but missed with a right uppercut and received a series of hard blows on the ribs. Superior infighting, however, gave Catteral the verdict.

Cleveland Wins 8-0 Decision Over Tigers

Allen Holds Foe to 4 Hits; Mates Drive Rowe From Mound.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 13.—Johnny Allen, the Yankees' pitching castoff, limited the Detroit Tigers to four hits today as he hurled the Indians to an 8-to-0 victory, his ninth straight and fifteenth of the season.

The Tribe pounded Schoolboy Rowe, Joe Sullivan and Clarence Phillips for 18 hits in taking the odd game of the series.

All of the Tigers' four hits were singles. For five innings they went hitless as Allen mowed them down without trouble.

Myer Goes Home For Brief Vacation

Dutch Girls Win Backstroke; Kiefer Swims Record Heat; 3 American Boats in Finals

Hume Still Ailing; Nazi Entries Survive in All Crew Events.

By the Associated Press.

Granau, Germany, Aug. 13.—A record-smashing array of 138 oarsmen, wielding sweeps in 42 assorted-sized racing craft, competed during six hours of competition today in thoroughly water-soaked conditions.

The unprecedented six-boat finals tomorrow in all seven Olympic title events will be featured by Germany's bid for her first team championship with the Teutons qualified in every race, and the University of Washington's attempt to keep the eight-oared supremacy safe for America against five of the best European boatloads ever mustered for the decisive battle of speed and brawn over the sprint route of 2,000 meters.

Great Britain, Switzerland, Italy, Hungary and Germany will oppose the American collegians who rule top-heavy favorites on the basis of the record-cracking 6:00.8 performance in yesterday's preliminary trials.

Hume's Condition Is Crux.

The team honors definitely have been yielded by the United States Navy which qualified finalists in two other events but had four remaining crews, including Harvard's quartet with coxswain, eliminated.

Sculler Dan Barrow, jr., and Double Scullers Bill Dugan and John Houser carried the banner of Philadelphia's Schuykill navy into the finals but they are not conceded even an outside chance of beating their potent European rivals.

Washington's chances in the big race hinge on the condition of Stroke Don Hume, whose chest cold developed bronchial complications following upon yesterday's record-breaking victory over Great Britain. The sophomore pace-setter spent most of the day in bed, but didn't lose his appetite and insisted he would be ready for the final.

Ulbrickson Confident.

Even with the crew's sparkplug ailing the Huskies appeared to have a sufficient margin of safety to beat any rival, though Coach Al Ulbrickson expects pressure throughout the race from the Britons and Hungarians, and possibly the Italians, who looked strong today.

"We haven't had any breaks since arriving, but I believe the boys have sufficient stuff and confidence to come through," said Ulbrickson. They're a game bunch right down the line, but I wish they could have benefitted by better health as well as training conditions."

Owing to today's program ending in darkness Ulbrickson canceled his plan to give the crew a brief spin before supper. He expects to send the Huskies over the course tomorrow morning just for exercise.

Despite "bearish" reports over Hume's condition, Washington ruled a strong favorite. Rainy weather with a headwind made comparison with yesterday's performances impossible, but the British, who eliminated Canada today in the process of clinching a berth in the finals gave another impressive performance.

British Look Good.

Laurie stroked the eight, composed mainly of Leander oarsmen, which paced the semifinal tests clocked in 6:29.3. The Italians, runners-up in the 1932 Olympics, eliminated Japan's last entry while Germany completed her qualifying sweep by outrowing Australia in the third eight-oared row-off.

The Teutons, who have been beaten only once in eight starts, thus far have by far the strongest regatta fleet and have a good chance to lift four titles. Switzerland qualified in six events and has the sculling favorite in E. Rufli and appears to be Germany's only challenger for fleet honors. The program starts at 2:30 p. m. (8:30 a. m. Eastern standard time), with the four-oared with coxswain final and ends at 6 p. m. with the big boats.

The Americans did about as well as expected, placing entries in three finals. Barrow took the sculling semifinals easily, trailing Germany's Gustav Schaefer by seven lengths and permitting Argentina's Giorgio to pull up so close as to require a

Owens Is Sought As a Track Coach

Xenia, Ohio, Aug. 13 (AP).—Wilberforce University, Ohio Negro educational institution, offered Jesse Owens a position as its track coach today.

In a cablegram to the four-time Olympic winner, Dr. D. Ormond Walker, University president, said: "Wilberforce offers you position as coach of track team to prepare for 1940 Olympics upon your graduation from Ohio State. Do not turn professional. Wilberforce will take care of you."

Miss Hill First Aquatic Star to Repeat; U. S. Has 4 Medals.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 13.—Joining the thin ranks of double Olympic winners, Dorothy Poynton Hill, Los Angeles blonde, became the first aquatic champion to repeat in the present games today when she easily retained the platform diving crown she won four years ago at Los Angeles.

In another day of consistent American performance marked by Adolf Kiefer's second record-breaking clocking in the 100-meter backstroke in as many days, the only United States setback came in the women's 100-meter backstroke finals. With the disbarred 1932 champion, Eleanor Holm Jarrett, looking on, Holland swept the first two places with Dina Senff and Rita Mastenbroek placing in that order. Alice Bridges, of Uxbridge, Mass., was third and Edith Motridge Segal, of Los Angeles, fourth.

Mrs. Jarrett stayed only long enough to watch the race

"What a lot of swimmers," she chortled. "They coudn't even beat the time I did four years ago."

Post League Officials Arrange Inter-League Playoff Series

Draws Made, Eligibility Decided

Teams Must Be Beaten Twice Before Being Eliminated.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Rumblings of the forthcoming battles for the city baseball championship were generated last night in the auditorium of The Washington Post Building when representatives of 13 leagues in The Post Sandlot Association met to arrange for the annual week-day play-offs. It was decided to start the week-day interleague series Tuesday, September 8.

The principal business of the evening centered on the week-day series, although two Sunday leagues also had representatives present, namely, the National City and Northern Virginia circuits.

The 11 week-day leagues of the association were all represented as follows: Industrial League, Secretary E. W. Flester; National Capital, President Claude E. Wessels; United States Government, Secretary J. W. Leverton and S. J. Tracy, of Bureau of Investigation; Departmental, Federal A and Federal AA Leagues, President Vic Gauzza; Sports Center Government, President Mike Sklar; Washington Church League, President Forrest Burgess; Bankers League, George P. Pollock; Army-Navy League, Lieut. L. L. Koepke; Department Store League, President Mike Gess.

Draws Are Made.

After some deliberation the draw for the first round of play was made. The opponents drawn were as follows: Sports Center Government League vs. Bankers League; Departmental League vs. Feedral A League; Army and Navy League vs. Washington Church League; Federal AA League vs. National Capital League; United States Government vs. Department Store League. The Industrial League drew a bye and will play United States Government in the second round.

It was decided a team must be beaten twice before being eliminated. Second-round games will bring together the first-named team against the third-named team, etc. Further rounds can not be scheduled as yet because of the possible elimination of teams in the second round.

Major discussion arose concerning eligibility of players. Rosters of teams to compete in the play-offs must be registered with the Post Association as soon as possible. Another meeting will then be held. Due to lack of uniformity among the rules of the various leagues, a protest board will attempt to solve such differences of opinion as may arise on questions of eligibility.

With some leagues having higher standards of eligibility than others, an effort is being made by the Post Association to bring all leagues upon an even plane, with no team being allowed to "pad" itself for the play-off series.

It was agreed to play all games at 4:30 p. m. with District Umpires Association arbiters officiating. The Post Association will select the diamonds and arrange the schedule, which will be published during the week of September 1.

The Heurich Brewers won the week-day championship last year. The Post Association expects the 1936 week-day champion to play the champion of its Sunday city leagues. The consequent victor will play the winner of a series among the Suburban leagues for the Metropolitan championship.

Playground Tennis Finalists

Owens to Meet March for Net Title

Clash at Chevy Chase in Playground Tourney Finals.

Harry March, of Burroughs, and Gene Owens, of Mitchell Park, tennis rivals of long standing, will take the center court at Chevy Chase Playground at 10:30 this morning to decide the senior tennis championship of the playgrounds. At the same hour Jimmy Hardey, also of Burroughs, and Mike Nunez, of Montrose, will battle for the junior title.

March, junior champ last year and mainstay of the Tech High team, is a slight favorite to defeat Owens, a finalist in the senior tourney last year. Gene, who was captain at Western High last spring, is steadier than March, but lacks Harry's pounding forehand drive and general assortment of strokes.

Nunez is given a slight edge over Hardey by virtue of his upset defeat of Leonard Sokol, of Burroughs, District of Columbia junior champion, in the semifinals. Mike played the best tennis of his life to beat Sokol and should give Hardey a strong battle today if he maintains the same pace.

Sherwood Girls Win Sectional Track Title

Sherwood Playground's lassies got revenge yesterday, and sweet it was, too, for a defeat their boys received from Rosedale in the Eastern Conference track meet last week, by winning the sectional title with 68 points to 48 for Rosedale, which placed second. Sherwood and Rosedale thus traded their conference laurels, for the Rosedale boys took the championship held by Sherwood last year and the Sherwood girls retaliated yesterday.

More than 380 girls, representing 17 playgrounds, participated. Langdon took third with 14 points and Hayes fourth with eight. While Sherwood and Rosedale found the Eastern Stadium cinder paths distinctly to their liking and grabbed most of the honors, nine other playgrounds scored.

The largest girls' conference meet of the four will be held at 10 a. m. today at Western Stadium, when representatives from 20 Western Conference playgrounds meet. About 500 are expected to compete.

Budge Swamps Van Ryn in Net Play at Rye

By the United Press.

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Don Budge, California ace, continued his march toward the men's Eastern grass court tennis championship without loss of a set today as he swept through the veteran John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, 6—0, 6—3, in the quarter-finals.

Van Ryn got off to a 3—2 lead in the second set, but Budge put on the pressure to run off the last four games with loss of only four points. In the semifinals he meets Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., winner of last week's Meadow Club tournament.

Robert Riggs, of California, meets Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., in the other semifinal. Riggs advanced almost as easily as Budge, turning back John McDiarmid, young Princeton instructor, 6—3, 6—4. Grant and Parker had a day of rest, having won their quarter-final tilts yesterday.

An upset marked the only encounter in the women's play, as Mme. Silvia Henrotin, of France, unseeded, eliminated top-seeded Alice Marble, of California, 6—1, 8—6, in a semifinal match. Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, and Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., meet in the other semifinal tomorrow.

Heurichs Battle To 3-3 Draw With Millers

Zahn's Hit in Ninth Brings Deadlock; Russell Is Standout.

For the second time in three days Heurich Brewers and Miller Furniture teams fought to a tie in their play-off series in the Industrial League of The Washington Post Baseball Association yesterday at the Ellipse.

The 3-3 score attested to the equal strength of the two, which battled to a 2-2 deadlock in the opener of the series Tuesday. Miller won Wednesday's game, 6 to 3.

Miller appeared well on its way to capturing its second straight victory until the Brewers aroused themselves in the ninth inning, and shoved over the run that balanced the scales. Zahn's single to left brought in Russell with the tying run.

First Blood.

Miller drew first blood with a run in the opening inning. Heurich chalked up markers in the fifth and sixth, and Miller put over two in the seventh with straight hitting.

Russell, Taylor and James worked on the mound for Heurich, while C. Wahler and Stevens twirled for Miller. Russell got two of Heurich's hits, while E. Waler, second-sacker, and McAboy rapped out three and two, respectively, for Miller.

D. C. Legion 2-0 Winner Over Clarksburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 13.—The Washington (D. C.) Junior American Legion team won a brilliant opening game from the Clarksburg Juniors here today, 2 to 0. Anderson, on the mound for Washington, and Rokiskey, hurling for Clarksburg, engaged in a brilliant hurling duel with the former winning, when he and his mates combined timely hits with Clarksburg errors to score two runs in the ninth inning.

Anderson accounted for 14 of his team's 27 putouts by fanning that number. He was particularly effective with men on bases.

After eight scoreless innings the visiting youngsters got to Rokiskey in the final frame. Giovanetti reached first on an infield error. Another infield wobble put Esenstad on base, Delesi, a short right-fielder, got his second hit of the game to drive in one run. Anderson took a hand in winning his own game by singling to drive in another.

The two teams play here again tomorrow, and if Washington wins the series will be over.

Officials Are Named for 10-Day Cumberland Race Meeting

E. J. Brennan In Charge Of Cards

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 13.—President Harry A. Manley, of the Cumberland Fair Association, which ushers in Maryland's fall racing season Tuesday, has announced that the Maryland Racing Commission has approved the list of officials selected to handle the 10-day sport here.

The men named to the various official positions are:

Steward, John Scheer; placing judges, Matthias C. Shea, John Brennan and J. P. Turner, jr.; clerk of scales, Matthias C. Shea; starter, Edward S. Welter; paddock judge, Wilmer Brinton; veterinarian, Dr. Henry J. McCarthy; patrol judge, William Shrewbridge; racing secretary, Edward J. Brennan; pari-mutuel manager, Earl Walden.

In the majority of instances these men have been serving here for years. They hold similar positions at various tracks throughout America, with Shea, who hails from Baltimore, being the representative steward for the Massachusetts Racing Commission during the recent session at Agawam Park.

Brennan Popular.

Brennan, who will make up the programs, will serve in a similar position during the Marlboro meeting, which follows on the heels of this session. Brennan, who is a member of the official family at Pimlico, Laurel and Bowie, also made up the programs at Agawam and has the confidence of horsemen and race followers alike.

The racing plant, located four miles out on the McMullen highway, is the finest of its kind in America. During the summer, President Manley spent $25,000 in improving the plant. Since the erection of the new barns and the improving of the old ones, it is now possible to house a bit over 400 horses.

Jesse Bennet, custodian of the jockeys' room, states he will have at least 30 riders in silks opening day. Among the outstanding boys to perform here will be Sammy Palumbo, Lou Pikor, Leon Garrett, Eddie Smith, Al Tryon, W. Hilley, Johnny Shanks and George Terhune.

U. S. Crew Seen Victor in Finals

The trio qualified without opposition after Poland's Verey, who previously rowed in the double sculls, collapsed 400 meters before the finish.

Rufli, winner of the last two diamond sculls, won the second semi-final with Hasenoehrl, of Austria, and Charlie Campbell, of Canada, beating Great Britain's Warren, who also was on the verge of collapse but managed to finish.

The United States double scullers squeezed into the finals, finishing behind Britain's veterans, Beresford and Southwood, among five starters. Beresford, incidentally, qualified for the fifth time for the Olympic finals. He won the single sculls title in 1924 after being beaten in 1920; rowed in the British eight in 1928 and helped the four-oared without coxswain shell capture the title four years ago.

The American pairs and fours passed out of the picture without much trouble or anything resembling hard luck except Harvard's four with coxswain representing the Riverside Club. The Crimsonites drew the toughest run-off entry, France, and took a two-length beating in 8:06.4, which would have been good enough to win either of the previous heats comfortably.

The French coxswain, only 12 years old and the youngest member of the Vandernotte family, steered the boatload, including two brothers, like a seasoned veteran. The youngster also operates the tiller ropes for the pair-oared shell which already qualified for the final. France's time was 8:00.6.

Suffolk Downs Feature Won By El Puma

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 13.—El Puma, 7-year-old son of Spanish Prince II, outgamed five rivals over a mile and an eighth to capture the best offering on a nine-race card before 12,000 persons at Suffolk Downs this afternoon.

Well rated off the early pace by Ray Hightshoe, El Puma, claimed two weeks ago by D. J. Sullivan 3d, made his move coming off the backstretch and held off Hastings and Little's Center Lane in a blazing stretch duel to complete the route in 1 minute 52 1-5 seconds.

Half a length back of Center Lane was John Sperry's Sandwrack, up with the contenders all the way and coming through on the rail on the turn into the stretch.

The second of the nine races was run for the benefit of the Boston Free Milk Fund, with the track's 6½ per cent of the total handle, $2,282.76, being contributed to that charity.

SCOTCH BOY was kept within striking distance of the pace, saved ground at the stretch turn, went to the front when straightening out in the stretch and drew clear in the closing furlong. MISS PECAN displayed good speed, withstood determined early opposition from ADDIS ABABA and, though holding on gamely, was not good enough for the winner. GLOW WORM, badly outrun early, closed with a rush in the last three-sixteenths. ADDIS ABABA, hard ridden all the way, faltered in the stretch run. CORKER closed a good gap. GAYETTE was unable to reach the leaders. KALEIDA, well placed early, stopped badly. ORPHAN LASS was outrun.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MELODY MAID, $6.60, $4.40, $2.80; CHRYSEIS, $8.00, $3.40; B EIGHTY, $2.80.

MELODY MAID was steadied along in back of the pace until reaching the stretch, was sent up on the outside of the leader and, taking command, held CHRYSEIS safe. CHRYSEIS, a forward factor all the way and, slightly reserved early, fought it out with good energy when called upon. B EIGHTY displayed the most early speed, drew away into a good lead only to weaken in the closing furlong. MANY MOONS, well placed while racing slightly restrained, was unable to make up any ground when placed under pressure. The others were far back throughout.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:26. Off at 3:28. Winner, W. E. Snyder's ch. g. JUBILEE JIM took command at once, was taken under snug restraint after drawing clear and, rated along in front, drew out steadily in the last furlong. TUGBOAT, in nearest pursuit of the pace from the start, while not good enough for the winner, held on willingly to the close. NOTICE ME, unable to keep pace early, closed ground through the last quarter. GRANDMA'S BOY was never a threat, though making up some ground. DOE GIRL, hard ridden early in an effort to keep pace, tired in the last five-sixteenths. SLIM JANE was never prominent.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 3:59½. Winner, Miss A. Doris' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREAT HASTE, $7.20, $3.40, $2.40; CHANCING, $3.40, $2.60; BLACK HIGHBROW, $2.60.

GREAT HASTE, under steadying restraint while following the pace, came to the outside in the stretch and, wearing down the leaders, held CHANCING safe. The latter, slow to settle into his best stride, moved up on the inside leaving the backstretch, saved considerable ground at the stretch turn when the leaders went wide and, despite closing gamely, was not good enough. BLACK HIGHBROW displayed speed in pacemaking, but much used in racing GROG into defeat, had nothing left with which to cope with the bids of the first two. FAKE faltered after racing the opening three furlongs. GROG stopped badly in the last quarter mile.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to 4:28. Off at once. Winner, D. J. Sullivan 3d's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EL PUMA, $8.60, $4.80, $2.60; CENTER LANE, $5.60, $3.20; SANDWRACK, $2.40.

EL PUMA was restrained off the pace until leaving the backstretch, moved up on the outside and, wearing down CENTER LANE, won going away. CENTER LANE, in closest pursuit of the early pace, went to the front when called upon and, despite holding on well, was not good enough. SANDWRACK closed with a belated rush on the outside through stretch. EVEN UP, well placed was unable to reach the leaders under punishment. GOLDEN SEPTRE displayed good speed in pacemaking, faltering after going six furlongs. O'NEILL trailed throughout.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:59½. Off at 4:59½. Winner, Miss Lois E. Hannon's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARCLEAVE, $25.40, $10.40, $5.00; SIR WINDSOR, $5.40, $4.00; BUNNY MARTIN, $4.40.

MARCLEAVE, in closest pursuit of the pace from the outset, responded gamely to pressure, getting up in the concluding stride. SIR WINDSOR took the lead in the run to the first turn, drew clear and, on the inside through the stretch, just failed to last. BUNNY MARTIN was well placed from the beginning, made her effort after rounding the far turn, though moving up briefly only to yield ground in the last furlong. BYRDEX, restrained early, was never able to reach a prominent position. BOGERTIN was far back the entire trip. PAUL JUNIOR faltered when placed under punishment.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:32. Off at 5:32½. Winner, Corcoran Stable's b. g. (6), by Happy Argo—Soulmate. Trained by A. G. Tarn. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:13 1-5, 1:39 3-5, 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLESSED EVENT, $3.80, $3.20, $2.80; BUD BROOM, $7.60, $5.20; SWEET BROOM, $7.80.

BLESSED EVENT gained a prominent position in the closing furlong, moved up on the outside in the run down the backstretch, took command nearing the far turn, increased his lead steadily and won as if outclassing his opposition. BUD BROOM worked his way up steadily in the last three furlongs and came willingly in the stretch run. SWEET BROOM, a trailer for the first five furlongs, closed stoutly on the outside in the stretch run. SPERO closed a good gap. SOPHIST, taken under stout restraint after gaining a forward position, was unable to threaten when called upon. BRIGHT BIRD had good speed in pacemaking, though stopping badly when overtaken. SWEEPERMAN was far back all the way.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:02. Off at 6:03½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLAY OFF, $8.80, $4.20, $3.20; ORTHOPRISM, $4.40, $3.20; PADDY'S SISTER, $4.20.

PLAY OFF was prominently placed from the start, took command when called upon and outlasted ORTHOPRISM at the end. ORTHOPRISM moved up stoutly leaving the backstretch, was fortunate in gaining clear sailing on the inside, suffered some interference in the stretch and though closing gamely was unable to wear down the leader. PADDY'S SISTER, away poorly, closed an immense gap and was apparently best as the race was run. MAD WIND closed some ground, though unable to reach the leaders. DASH IN faltered after going five furlongs. PHARENOUGH had brief speed. WAR PROFITS loomed up menacingly nearing the half-mile ground, only to weaken badly thereafter.

NINTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 6:34. Off at 6:35. Winner, Mrs. A. Schwartz's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAIR IMAGE, $8.40, $5.20, $3.60; AMERICAN BELLE, $5.00, $3.60; HAPPY EASTER, $4.00.

FAIR IMAGE, hard hustled from the start to gain the lead, drew clear straightening out on the backstretch and dominated the running to the close, though ridden out smartly to make certain to score. AMERICAN BELLE, reserved early, moved up gamely leaving the backstretch and finished willingly. HAPPY EASTER, outpaced early, came through on the inside at the stretch turn and was going stoutly at the close. STRANGE TIMES, hard ridden while chasing in nearest pursuit of the pace, faltered in the stretch run. BLADE EDGE was never able to reach the leaders. CURB BIT weakened steadily in the last three furlongs.

Out Fishing . . By Jack Hawley

Bulletin.

Col. William P. Chantland, of the Federal Trade Commission, with a party of friends caught 61 blues from 3 to 9 pounds; 35 trout, 4 to 6 pounds, and 6 rock, 3 pounds each, yesterday morning between Point No Point and St Jeromes Creek. Twelve boats returning from the Southwest Middles last night brought in from 50 to 125 blues each.

Last month Robert E. Bing and party of local anglers boarded their cabin cruiser for a fishing trip to Cape Charles, Va. The result of that successful trip is history. The cost of the trip, being lightened by the sale of some excellent catches, has encouraged them sufficiently to make another to the same fine fishing grounds during the latter part of this month.

Mr. Bing says "we are seeking the companionship of four high-class anglers on this trip to help defray expenses, which we estimate at $20 per person, including food and transportation. Our boat is a 40-footer, sleeps six comfortably and has a bathroom."

Here is a chance for the angler seeking a good, restful and enjoyable fishing vacation. The price is very reasonable considering the excellent accommodations and unlimited fishing time. For further information drop into the Star Radio Co., 409 Eleventh street northwest, and ask for Alfred Hines. We bet the line forms before daybreak.

The best story we have heard in a long time comes to us from Ocean City, where marlin fishing has been giving local anglers sore arms over plenty of lost fish—big ones. Capt. Clarence Carpenter, skipper of the cruiser Susie B, had been harboring the idea that there must be some way to catch marlin besides investing $100 for rod, reel and line.

Walking into one of the local hardware stores he purchased four balls of 36-thread rope, 100 yards to the ball. Other boatmen watching the purchase being wrapped up asked Carpenter what he intended to do with so much rope. "Catch marlin," was the curt reply, "just like we hand-line other fish." Amid a loud guffaw from the local residents he disappeared into the night.

Hooks Marlin.

The following day he was engaged by Mr. George Harvey, of Long Island, N. Y., an elderly gentleman, who was anxious to try his luck with the sword fish. Mr. Harvey hooked a marlin with rod and line and after a 58-minute fight lost his fish. Being completely exhausted after his tussle, he retired to a bunk to catch some sleep. Capt. Carpenter thought it would be a good opportunity to try out economical tackle and produced the hand line which he rigged to the boat that it might unwind freely.

Several minutes elapsed after the bait had been tossed overboard and suddenly "wham" and the marlin was on and putting out to see at express-train speed. The first 100 yards went out smoothly. The next ball of rope went half way out and then became entangled, but kept right on going. The third ball went out without trouble, but the fourth hit a snag and was getting shorter every minute. Carpenter, seeing that the fish had no intention of slowing up in his haste to cross the Atlantic faster than the Queen Mary, hurriedly tried to check his fish by throwing the line around the sampson post, but got his arm caught in the tangled mess of rope, cutting a piece out of his arms and burning his wrist.

He then got the line free from his arm, but got his thumb enmeshed in some more tangles, which promptly removed all the skin from said thumb. Finally getting the line around the sampson post, he watched two deep ridges beginning to burn through the post. Hastily he tossed the free end of the rope around the upright holding up the cabin support, but instantly the marlin pulled that down.

In disgust and getting madder every minute, Carpenter looked up at the out rigger and thought, "ol' boy, I'll fix you now so you won't get away," and promptly run the line up to the top of the rigger and immediately down came the bamboo rigger into the water. He tried the other rigger and ditto, but the marlin took the remnants out to sea and to freedom. Carpenter looked around—Mr. Harvey was doing his best to suppress his laughter in spite of the wounds of the skipper.

Carpenter said "What do you make of that fish?"

"Well," drawled Mr. Harvey, "By the time the doctor patches you up and you have this boat repaired I think you will be out the price of an excellent piece of Marlin equipment. Hand lines have never proven successful in my 40-odd years of world-wide fishing."

Some of our local professional men have found Ocean City's marlin fishing all we have recommended during the past few weeks.

Fishing Contest.

Winners for August in the fishing contest sponsored by the Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair Association are as follows: Largest drum, 48 inches long and weight 58 pounds, caught by L. H. Kreser, Johnstown, Pa., fishing with Capt. Paul Bonton, Winona, Md. Prize is a Pflueger Capitol reel. Largest rockfish, 34 inches long, weight 15 pounds, by Grover Carter, Rock Hall, Md. Prize, 200 yards Ashaway line. Largest trout, 29 inches long, weight 6½ pounds, caught by Jack Keef, of Pittsburgh, Pa., off Sharps Island. Prize, Metaluro bait. Largest croaker weighed 4 pounds and 4 ounces, caught by Mrs. Katie Edmunds, Homestead, Pa., fishing off Tilghman Island. The lady received a case of tomato juice.

Down at Wachapreague the channel bass have retreated until next month or early September. However, bluefish, flounders, trout and other species are plentiful according to reports received from A. H. G. Mears. Sharks are very numerous for those that care for this kind of "tug of war."

Brady McKay, who is rated as one of the best bluefishing guides in the Chesapeake, phones us some more good news regarding the return of the supposedly absent blues on the Middle Grounds. He says, "I seldom write letters but, when I do, you know how it is—I might catch 'em today and tomorrow the blues would be taking their day off. Yesterday Capt. L. L. Cobb, military instructor at Georgetown University, was accompanied by R. H. Brown, George Wyril and brother Sam. We landed 51 blues from 2 to 10 pounds, all taken by trolling. Capt. Wise, who was fishing a party in another boat, did equally as well and later in the afternoon his party picked up over 50 fine trout and plenty of big hardheads."

Fishing Now Good.

Fishing this week-end should be good at Galesville, Herring Bay, Solomons Island, Point Lookout, Broome Island, Benedict, Crisfield, Piney Point, Plum Point, Kenwood Beach, Colonial Beach and the entire Eastern shore. Most of your catches will consist of trout and hardheads leading in numbers caught. Rockfish (pan size) and blue fish should be caught in the largest numbers since last season.

The bay is literally full of bluefish but the majority are averaging around two pounds. Higher averages on the Middle Grounds. With favorable weather anglers should experience their best trip contemplated so far this season. Don't delay making immediate reservations because they are going very fast. If we can help you make your trip more successful, phone Atlantic 1926.

Ahearn Seeks Good Prelims For Card

Buddy Scott, Raspi, Ciaccio to Appear With Feldman-Scott Contest.

Hoping to make the supporting card to the Howard Scott-Lew Feldman bout at Griffith Stadium next Monday night one of the best ever seen locally, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday signed two very promising bouts to round out the card. Because substitutions marred the supporting card at his last show, Ahearn is making a special effort to make all bouts on the forthcoming card the very best.

The two bouts booked yesterday are scheduled for six rounds each. In them Buddy Scott, brother of the high-ranking cowboy, will oppose Red Loughran, a dangerous light-heavyweight from Baltimore. In the other Young Raspi, a Baltimore lightweight, will face Tommy Ciaccio, a hard-hitting Newark Italian.

Feldman Rated High.

Buddy Scott proved the only bright spot on the last preliminary card. He was very impressive in knocking out George Cox, former District Golden Glove champion, who was regarded as a bright local prospect.

In the main event, which is carded for 10 rounds, Scott will be facing a highly regarded Jewish lightweight, who formerly was recognized in New York State as featherweight champion of the world. He is the last man to defeat the present champion, Pete Sarron, and spoiled the records of both Tony Herrera and Norment Quarles when both seemed headed for the heights.

Hardly less interesting than the Scott-Feldman tussle is another 10-round engagement between Frankie Blair and Lew Raymond. Blair, a very busy punch pusher from New Jersey, has twice defeated District Welterweight Champion Phil Furr and also has won from Mickey Serrian, Roy Manley, Cary Wright, Eddie Faris, Harry Dublinsky and Tony Falco.

Short Trout Season Opposed by Frederick

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., Aug. 13.—Attempts to shorten the opening of the 1937 trout season in Maryland by 15 days by starting April 15 instead of April 1, will be opposed by the Frederick County Game and Fish Protective Association, Clarence C. Carty, president, said today. A plan, to be presented before the next session of the Legislature, has been prepared by Baltimore sportsmen, calling for a later opening for trout. As Frederick County is the principal trout fishing county of the State, the local organization intends fighting any change in the present opening, Carty said.

Kensington vs. Grays.

Kensington A. C. will play the Chevy Chase Grays on Corby's Field in Carr Park, Baltimore, 3 p. m. Sunday, August 16.

A Fish a Day Keeps the Doctors Away

Dorothy Hill Retains Diving Title

dence, Mrs. Hill chalked up higher scores on three out of the four dives off the high boards than any of her 22 rivals. Among the few to better her mark on the fourth dive, a back somersault, was her teammate, Velma Dunn, of Los Angeles, who finished a strong second, only 30-100ths of a point behind the winner. Kathe Koehler, of Germany, was third. Mrs. Hill scored 33.93 points, Miss Dunn 33.63 and Miss Koehler 33.43.

The inability of Cornelia Gilisen, of New York, to take better than fifth place deprived America of its third straight sweep in the diving events of the current games. Previously Dick Degener, Marshall Wayne and Al Greene had swept the men's springboard finals and Marjorie Gestring, Katherine Rawls and Mrs. Hill had finished in that order in the women's springboard championship.

Mrs. Hill's victory, however, earned America its fourth gold medal in aquatic competition. Kiefer, in the men's backstroke, and Wayne in the men's platform diving, are considered virtual certainties to add two more to Uncle Sam's collection.

Miss Senff's triumph in the women's backstroke final gave Holland its second gold medal in one of the most thrilling finishes of the competition to date.

She and her teammate, Rita Mastenbroek, and the two Americans went into the final ten meters with nothing to choose between them. They hit the finish line so close together that almost five minutes elapsed before the judges could get them untangled. Twice scoreboard attendants announced Miss Bridges had won second place only to hastily yank her number down.

When it was finally decided that Miss Mastenbroek was second, Miss Bridges third and Mrs. Segal fourth, there still was only seven-tenths of a second separating the quartet. Miss Mastenbroek, the 100-meter free-style champion, came within inches of completing what would have been the strangest double of them all. Miss Senff's time, 1:18.9, was far short of the new Olympic record of 1:16.6 she set in the trials.

Outside of the two finals, the day was furiously occupied with preliminaries in four events, working up to an overcrowded finish tomorrow and Saturday.

Kiefer, winning his semifinal in 1:06.8, clipped one-tenth of a second off the new Olympic record he had established yesterday and looked more than ever like the man the rest would have to beat in the final tomorrow.

Al Wende Weghe, of Paterson, N. J., whose listed world record of 1:07.4 Kiefer has bettered on successive days, finished second to the Chicagoan and qualified for the finals along with Taylor Drysdale, of Detroit, who won the second semifinal in 1:08.6. The Japanese, Masaji Kiyokawa, looked like the only menace to a possible American sweep.

Only One U. S. Casualty.

Americans experienced no difficulty getting past the opening round of men's 200-meter breast stroke and 1,500-meter free style and women's 400-meter free style competitions. The only casualty, in fact, was Dorothea Dickinson, of New York, who withdrew from the 400-meter event because of a shoulder injury.

Lenore Kight Wingard, of Homestead, Pa., and Mary Lou Petty, of Seattle, swimming easily and making no attempt to race, placed second and third, respectively, in their 400-meter heats. Ragphild Hveger, of Denmark, became a joint favorite with Miss Mastenbroek when she set the fastest time for the five heats and broke Helene Madison's Olympic record of 5 minutes 28.5 seconds by five-tenths of a second.

Japanese Is Favorite.

None of the stars took the trials seriously, since they must repeat the long and trying test again tomorrow and Saturday.

Johnny Higgins, of Providence, R. I., and Jack Kasley and Ray Kaye, of Detroit, had similarly simple progress into the semifinals of the breast-stroke event, but none was talking very loud about an American victory in the final after watching Detsuo Hamuro, the Japanese fish, set a new Olympic record of 2 minutes 42.5 seconds.

Two of the three gold medals which will be passed out tomorrow, the men's platform dive and the men's back stroke, seemed almost certainly destined to adorn American trophy cases, but the third, the women's 400-meter relay, was earmarked for Holland, barring serious illness to either Willy Denouden or Miss Mastenbroek.

Anglers Hang Up New Records in Tourney

Portland, Oreg., Aug. 13 (AP).—C. F. Braddon, Cleveland, and Judge E. E. Cavanaugh, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, president of the National Association of Scientific Angling Clubs, established new records in the opening event of the twenty-eighth international fly-casting tournament here today.

Braddon won the salmon distance fly competition with an average cast of 178 feet to better his own world's record set last year, while Judge Cavanaugh, whose average was only 1 foot shorter, made one cast of 182 feet, an all-time tournament record.

Blues in Potomac.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 13.—The blues are in the Potomac and eager to be caught, according to reliable veteran fishermen. They are running from 3 to 6 pounds each and catches of 30 blues and 50 rock made by one party trolling off Tall Timbers are reported.

3 Tied in Mountain Loop.

Elk Garden, W. Va., Aug. 13.—Three clubs are tied for the top berth in the Mountain States Baseball League as a result of Elk Garden winning from Potomac CCC Camp at Elk Garden, 7-5, and Shallmar defeating Crellin, 3-2, at the latter place.

Sailboat Skippers Converging On Oxford for 3-Day Regatta

By the Associated Press.

Oxford, Md., Aug. 13.—Delmarva peninsula sailing skippers converged on Oxford tonight, prepared for an early-morning tune-up session prior to the start of the three-day regatta sponsored by the Tred Avon Yacht Club.

The regatta, sixth annual offering of the local club, will be run in conjunction with the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club. The feature event will be the two-race series for the J. Graham Johnson memorial trophy, offered for star class boats.

Running the memorial race a close second in interest is the Lipton trophy series, also for stars. The first race in each series will be run at 2 p. m. tomorrow, with the final on Sunday at 11 a. m. Sunday's closing program also will bring out racing sloops of no more than eight meters, contesting for the Dr. James A. Stevens memorial trophy.

The Gibson Island-Oxford race, a Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club event, winds up at 10 a. m. tomorrow to start the program. At 10:30, a free-for-all event for craft 24 feet and under is scheduled, with log canoes racing in a handicap test at 2 p. m.

Scrappy Cats get away at 2:15 in the first of a series of three races, and the inaugural day closes with a special scrappy cat night race listed for 8:30 p. m.

The latter event, installed as a fixture on the Tred Avon program last year, was expected to provide plenty of color for fans along the shore. Buoys and boats, as well as committee craft, are lighted.

A reception for visiting yachtsmen and guests will be held at the Tred Avon clubhouse tomorrow night, with trophy presentations and a dance at the Talbot Country Club scheduled for Saturday night.

Ralph H. Wiley is chairman of the Tred Avon race committee. Other members are Philemon A. Willis, S. Wayman Delahay, J. S. Wilford and Henry Wilcox.

Intense Heat Lifts Corn to 11-Year Peak

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—In a broad general buying movement, corn became the grain market leader late today, and moved buoyantly upward to highest prices reached since March, 1925.

An immediate incentive was torrid temperature West and Southwest outdoing the season's maximum at many points, and dispelling hope of any quick moisture relief for late corn and for hay and pasture growth. No. 2, white corn available to be used at once brought $1.24 to $1.25 a bushel here, and No. 1, white touched $1.26, upturns of 2½ to 4 cents and to prices unequalled before in more than a decade.

The entire corn market closed strong at almost the day's top level, 1¾@2¾ above yesterday's finish, September 108⅝@108¾, December 96¼@96½, May 92⅝@92¾; wheat 1 cent to 1⅞ up, September 111⅞@112, December 111¾@111⅞, May 110½@110⅝; oats ⅛@⅜ advanced, December ¼@½, and rye showing 1⅝@1¾ bulge, December 79⅞. In provisions, results were unchanged to a jump of 22 cents.

Excess Reserve Seen Reduced To 1.7 Billions

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board estimated last night that excess bank reserves would total between $1,700,000,000 and $1,750,000,000 on Saturday after its order increasing reserve requirements goes into effect. This figure compares with $1,900,000,000, the total which the board predicted excess reserves would then reach, a prediction made when the increase was ordered.

As of the close of business yesterday all reserves totaled $6,116,000,000 and excess reserves aggregated $3,170,000,000. The statement said:

"On August 12 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,477,000,000, an increase of $14,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $111,000,000 in member bank reserve balances, $7,000,000 in money in circulation, and $17,000,000 in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, offset in part by increases of $11,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $2,000,000 in Treasury currency, and a decrease of $107,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks.

SEC Charges Manipulation Of Curb Stock

Complaint Names Dictograph Products Co., Brokers and Individuals.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—The Securities and Exchange Commission today filed in Federal Court a complaint alleging the stock of Dictograph Products Co. has been subject to "manipulation" while listed on the New York Curb Exchange.

The complaint asks the court to enjoin several individuals and brokerage concerns from violating the law. Named in the papers were Archie M. Andrews, A. M. Andrews Investment Corporation, Pirnie, Simons & Co., Thomas Bracken, Raymond Cheseldine, Vincent J. McMann and Harry Aaron.

The papers set forth incidents alleging that through a number of brokerage firms "matched" orders were placed to "stimulate" activity in the security, "creating actual or apparent active trading in such security for the purpose of inducing others to buy or sell such security."

Transactions covered in the papers were alleged to have occurred between October 1, 1935, and November 18. The complaint asserts those named "continued to violate provisions of the act by manipulative transactions up to to the present time and will continue to do so unless enjoined by the court."

The stock has a 1936 range of 5⅞ low, 25 high, 23 on Wednesday, and 19⅝ yesterday.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Shift Indecisively in Moderate Trading; Government Bonds Strong; Grains Higher.

New York, Aug. 13.—Stocks moved irregularly in moderately active trading, with most strength shown in the middle hours. Closing prices were near the poorest. Bonds were firmer, the Treasury group finding a good demand. Commodities continued to advance. September wheat closed 1¾ cents higher at 111⅞ cents a bushel.

In stocks the big guns in the steel and motor groups helped to steady prices, but the largest price gains were in some of the minor stocks. Crucible, Vanadium, Inland and Sloss-Sheffield preferred were the best performers in the steel group. Rails were firm to strong, but were not especially active. Advances were scattered as to territory. Santa Fe, Nickel Plate and Pittsburgh & West Virginia rose a point or so. Central and Southern Pacific were a trifle heavy.

Coal company stocks were a feature of the late trading. They were strong and active, running up 1 to 3 points. Leaders were Lehigh Valley and Pittsburgh. The market rather anticipated a hint of higher coal prices. The public utility group was what brokers call selective. Telephone kept out of the market until the beginning of the third hour, when it opened a little higher. Consolidated Edison was firm. Standard Gas issues pushed ahead 1 to 3 points.

Metal shares edged forward. International Nickel went through some profit taking. United States Smelting recovered 2 points. Motors were narrow and uninteresting, as were the accessories. Oils were irregular, with Standard trying to pull out of the rut. Chemicals were mixed.

Specialties Rise.

Favorable dividend news helped Federated Department Stores. Sloss Sheffield regained its best price since 1929. American Brake Shoe, American Car & Foundry and American Locomotive were the favored railroad equipment stocks. Specialties to climb 1 to 2 points were A. M. Byers, Collins & Aikman, Congoleum, General Theater Equipment, Philip Morris and Superheater.

Neither the money market nor the stock and bond departments are currently showing any particular apprehension over what likely will take place in money rates with the change on Saturday to the higher bank reserve requirements. Notwithstanding the merits of arguments against the reserve change as a method of bringing down the pile of excess reserve, or even the opposition to any action at this time, the decision of the Federal Reserve Board (i. e., the Federal Treasury) is not regarded in any responsible quarter as intended to be a deflationary move. If it results in deflation, at least that was not the aim of the authorities, and in that event, corrective measures might be applied.

Federal Measures.

Following as it did the higher margin requirements for stocks, the higher taxes penalizing business and certain other steps taken by the Government, there was some uneasiness at the start that the Administration was attempting to put the brakes on business recovery. What seems nearer the truth is that a moderate amount of surplus credit lying around will do just as much as a far larger pile to stimulate a business recovery, and that neither is much good except to assist recovery already under way.

If the calling of balances here by out of town banks, which will begin next week, and possible sales of Government bonds by banks deficient in reserves bring no harm to the markets, reassurance will have been given. Just the same, the unknown quantities in the reserve manipulation no doubt helped to give uncertainty to the markets over the past four weeks. Some offsetting gain may be mentioned, namely, the implication of a conversion of the New Dealers to the side of monetary stability. There seems to be at long last some realization at Washington of the fact that inflation is a dangerous toy, although no one will believe it sincere until an honest effort is made to balance the budget.

Addition to excess reserves from gold imports cannot be ruled out over the next few weeks. After a day or two of strength the French franc and other gold currencies slipped today, and sterling responded to the development by moving higher. The change was merely a relapse to the old feeling of distrust by capital of the efficacy of the new French measures designed at the same time to "reflate" prices in France and to maintain the franc on gold—a difficult job with the carrying of the Treasury deficits by the Bank of France.

This week's statement of the French central bank shows another small addition to the gold reserve and a drop in circulation, the latter probably an aftermath of the month end operations. Circulation of the Bank of England fell only slightly and gold increased a little. Meanwhile, according to British commentators, the British Stabilization Fund, with large amounts of earmarked gold at the Bank of France, which do not appear in the French bank's published gold holdings, is removing the metal to London. That precaution, in the light of the developments in Spain, is quite understandable.

Odd Lots.

Declaration of a $3.50 dividend on Sloss Sheffield preferred proved to be far from discounted by the market. The stock climbed 15 points to 100 before demand and supply came into balance. The dividend was the first since 1930. It is not cumulative. . . . A few stocks that are regarded as inherently good but which have shown a remarkable sluggishness for a long time managed to get ahead a little. Standard Oil was one, rising 2 points or so. Another was American Radiator. . . . The success of Crucible, in climbing 30 per cent in a few days of trading, encouraged other small steel company stocks. Vanadium was bid up more than 2 points. . . . That date in the calendar has been reached following which Wall Street doesn't expect anything much to happen until after Labor Day.

Jittery.

The constant inquiry into market operations by the SEC, and the proceedings against brokers and professional operators on charges of manipulating prices is a bit trying on the nerves of some Wall Street men. One spokesman for investment dealers warns: "By the way, rumor has it SEC is 'planting' people in offices. Mentioned this before, but do it again. Might as well be sure your employes are working for you and not for somebody else."

Buses.

Although the accounts are so stated as to conceal operations in second quarter, which would cover a month of the new low railroad and bus passenger fares, the six months' accounts of Greyhound show a small loss as compared with the same period of a year ago. Whatever the cause of the poorer showing, there is little question but that the 2-cents-a-mile rate on the railroads is cutting into bus passenger business, even though the bus lines have countered with lower fares.

Another Nickel.

A short time ago International Nickel voted another nickel a share to be added to the quarterly dividend. It now reports earnings for second quarter at just a nickel a share over those for first quarter. Demand for nickel is at a rate which foreshadows additional nickels in the earnings and dividends.

Fed. Stores Vote Raise and Extra

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Directors of Federated Department Stores Co., Inc., declared a special dividend of 15 cents and a dividend of 35 cents on the common, both payable October 1 to stock of record September 21, it was announced today. Previously this year the company paid 25 cents a common share, on January 1, April 1 and July 1.

Total net sales of the company's subsidiaries for the first half were reported at $45,175,457 compared with $39,917,659 a year ago, a gain of 13.17 per cent.

Masonite Corporation Extra.

Chicago, Aug. 13 (AP).—Directors of Masonite Corporation have put the common stock on a $2 annual dividend basis as compared with $1 previously with the declaration of a quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share, it was announced today. An extra of 50 cents also was declared. Both dividends are payable September 15 to stock on record September 1. The regular semiannual dividend of $3.50 on the preferred stock also was declared.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 13.—Activity in today's stock market was restricted somewhat by the settlement of week-end accounts. Industrials were again very firm and motor shares, tobacco, transatlantic and oil issues moved to higher ground. Gilt-edged securities and foreign bonds maintained a cheerful tone while railroad stocks declined on profit taking.

Paris—Irregularity prevailed in the Bourse, coal shares advancing slightly and international securities moving fractionally in both directions. The market firmed in the late dealings with Bank of France shares being quoted at 5,490 francs, compared with 5,250 yesterday.

Liverpool—Wheat futures scored an advance of two pence or more on strong Canadian shippers offers, bullish official Canadian carryover and buying by London grain houses. Cotton closed higher, Bombay selling being absorbed by trade calling, covering and speculative buying. The advance followed unfavorable weather reports from the United States.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Pressure on European gold currencies was renewed in Foreign Exchange dealings yesterday and quotations sagged moderately in terms of the dollar.

The French franc sold at 6.58⅛ cents, a loss of .00⅛ of a cent, and closed in Paris at the equivalent of 6.584 cents, compared with the overnight New York rate of 6.589. Holland guilders dipped .02 of a cent to 67.90 cents.

The British pound shared some of the dollar's strength against the gold currencies. It advanced to $5.02⅛, up ⅛ of a cent, and closed in London at 5.02⅝, against the overnight New York rate of 5.02½.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 13.—For every month since August, 1933, the cost of living has been higher than the year previous. Food prices increased 4.7 per cent from May to June alone, while rents were 11 per cent higher than a year ago.

Steel Demand Is Maintained At High Level

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—"It is a sellers' market in every sense of the word," Iron Age says today in its weekly review of the steel industry. "A month ago steel companies were concerned as to whether steel production could be maintained at an undiminished rate through August, while now it appears almost certain that there will be no important letdown even in September.

"Purchasing of steel by automobile companies for 1937, which is now beginning to appear in fairly good volume, will fill up whatever gaps might otherwise occur in rolling-mill schedules next month, while in sheets an even tighter situation than now exists may be expected in motor-car companies' demand quick deliveries." While the volume of new business in some products has declined at a few mills, a brisk demand exists, particularly for sheets, bars and structural steel that is keeping backlogs almost even with shipments, the review says.

Sheet makers could easily book business for delivery in October were they inclined to do so," the trade paper asserted, "but the possibility of price advances for fourth quarter makes this inadvisable. Galvanized sheets are almost unobtainable in less than six to eight weeks. If deliveries extend into the fourth quarter the price then in effect will apply."

July Failures Lowest Total For 16 Years

Month's Casualties 639, Smallest With 2 Exceptions Since 1894.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 13.—A decline in commercial failures to the lowest figures since the post-war boom days of 1920 was recorded today as an index of improving business health. Figures compiled by Dun & Bradstreet for July made the lowest monthly total since September, 1920, and showed a continuation of the rate of decline in the first week of August.

Rarely since the mercantile agency began keeping the casualty record before the Civil War has the mortality rate, figured in proportion to the business field, been as low as at present, said Willard L. Thorp, the director of economic research.

On the basis of an index kept by the agency since the end of 1932, July insolvencies were at the annual rate of 38.2 for each 10,000 firms in business. It compared with 44.6 in June and 52.8 in July, 1935. In January, 1933, as business was heading for the banking holiday, it was above 170 and a former index, computed somewhat differently, soared above 200 at the peak of the depression epidemic of failures.

July failures numbered 639, a figure exceeded on the downside only twice for the month since 1894 despite the growth of population and business in the meanwhile. It compared with 902 in the same month last year and 2,596 in July, 1932, around the peak of the depression liquidation movement.

Liabilities involved were less than $10,000,000 in contrast with $16,523,000 in the 1935 month and $87,190,000 in the 1932 period. For the year to August 6 failures totaled 6,157 against 7,355 in the corresponding 1935 months, a drop of 16.3 per cent.

292 Air Pilots By July, 1937, Sought by Navy

Personnel Increase Needed to Fill Treaty Fleet Requirements.

In a move to remedy an increasing shortage of Navy airplane pilots, the Bureau of Aeronautics yesterday sent instructions to commanding officers to forward applications from enlisted men qualified to become "aviation pilots."

The Navy is now engaged in increasing its aviation personnel to almost twice its present size. The program is designed to meet requirements of a 1942 treaty strength fleet.

The instructions asked commanding officers on all ships and stations to forward applications of men physically and temperamentally adapted to become pilots. These men will be trained at the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla.

An existing shortage in the "aviation pilot" grade will be increased to 292 next July as the result of the commissioning the new aircraft carriers Enterprise and Yorktown and of four cruisers. The organization of new squadrons for the fleet also will contribute to the shortage.

At the present time the Navy has 1,311 planes in service. Contracts were recently let for 114 torpedo bombers to be carried on the aircraft carriers. By 1942 it is planned to have a toal of 1,910 planes.

Last year 494 naval reserve aviation cadets started flying training at Pensacola. An initial group of 35 cadets will be assigned to duty with the fleet this month. New classes will graduate each month until approximately 250 are expected to be with the fleet in 1937.

$5,000 Damages Asked.

Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 13—Damages of $5,110.25 were asked by J. A. Hunsecker and his wife, of Fayetteville, in a suit against Sarah A. Stoner, of Guilford Township, filed in the Franklin County courts yesterday. The action is based on an automobile collision in which Mrs. Hunsecker was injured.

Norman Jarvis, of the Bureau of Fisheries, experimenting to discover new methods that can be used by housewives in canning fish.

Stengle President?

Col. Charles I. Stengle, legislative representative and chief organizer of the A. F. G. E., is claiming 95 delegaes to the Detroit convention as having pledged him their votes to succeeed President Claude Babcock.

The colonel refused to tell us which of the lodges have indorsed him. "I'm not going to tell my opponents where to go to work." was his reply.

He did say, however, that 62 of the delegates were from the District of Columbia. Since the convention normally seats less than 250 delegates, Stengle would have to corral only another 30-odd delegates to insure himself a majority.

The former Representative from New York had just returned from a six-week, 4,400-mile organization trip through the country when we spoke to him. Three hundred additional members have been recruited to A. F. G. E. standards, while four new lodges have been organized and two others are in the process of formation, he reported.

The new lodges are Postoffice lodges in St. Louis and Minneapolis, a resettlement unit in Denver and a veterans' group in Chicago. The lodges-to-be are Internal Revenue and Veterans' units in St. Louis.

We asked the colonel whether he received Presidential indorsements from any of the lodges in the 15 cities he visited. He parried the question by replying that his talks were confined solely to organization matters and that neither politics nor the Babcock affair were discussed at the meetings. Then we repeated the question, he smiled, and said, "After I left a meeting, in several cases, I was later told that the lodge had indorsed me."

Stengle was appointed to his present position by President Babcock two years ago. Not being a member of the executive council he had no part in the attempt to oust Babcock. He still calls his former superior "Babs."

Among those who already have tossed their hats into the ring in opposition to Stengle are Ruloff R. Strattan, of Civil Service; Clyde Mills, vice president of the Central Labor Union; George Googe, an American Federation of Labor organizer; Charles Morrison, southern vice president of the A. F. G. E.; William Hushing, A. F. of L. legislative representative, and James Campbell, of the Veterans' Administration.

New Library Agency.

The U. S. Office of Education is drawing up the civil service qualifications for a chief librarian specialist and one or two specialist assistants who will comprise the staff of the newy created library agency in the office. Each of the specialists will have a stenographer to be drawn from the civil service lists.

Salaries have not been settled yet, but will be paid from a $25,000 appropriation for the coming fiscal year. Included among the many duties of the new agency, Commissioner John W. Studebaker explained, will be to make surveys, studies, investigations and reports of libraries, to co-ordinate library service on a national level as has been done with adult education and to foster Nation-wide co-ordination on a national scale of the research materials among the more scholarly libraries.

Marian Skinner, Anna Coburn and Nicie Perrell of the Women's Union of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing of the N. F. F. E. are to be presented with wallets for their work in recruiting new members at the September 8 meeting. In case you're curious, as we were, the wallets are specially designed to meet feminine needs.

More Than Fish Story.

This being our first Friday column we thought we'd find out what the Bureau of Fisheries is doing to make housewives fish-conscious.

The answer is a little bit of everything that you can think of, from preparing new recipes and studying the possibilities of substitutes for cod liver oil to collecting price information and improving methods of canning fish at home.

There is no official "making the housewife fish-conscious" division in the bureau, the stimuating of fish consumption being one of the duties of the Division of Fishery Industries, headed by R. H. Fiedler. Appetizing recipes being one sure way of inducing wives and mothers to provide more fish courses at meals, the division has prepared a fish cook book of which 60,000 copies were distributed last year. The division also distributed 20,000 copies of "The Story of Oysters," written by Fiedler and containing 35 choice recipes.

Home-canning of fish products is increasing steadily in popularity and it is Norman Jarvis' task to improve canning methods. It requires at least a year and perhaps two or three to complete a canning experiment. After the fish are packed, under varying temperatures, with and without bacteria, they are left on a shelf for a year or more to see what happens.

Right now Jarvis is beginning to open the 140 experimental fish packs he has on the shelf. Jarvis has already worked out the best home-canning procedures for salmon, shad, mackerel, trout, whitefish, fish and clam chowder, clams and shrimp. When he completes his present experiments, if he is successful, the housewife will also be able to can deviled crabs, oysters, crab cocktails, salmon chowder, fish food for dogs and cats.

Both Jarvis and Fiedler have high hopes for mussel canning. Americans don't eat mussel but the French consume 400,000 pounds a year. Kiedler also hopes for the day when Americans will be eating lots other fish, which they don't know exists now. There are 160 different species of edible fish yet 11 kinds account for 80 per cent of American consumption. If you're ever in need of a parlor game you might try seeing how many of the 160 fish you or your guests can name.

In its fish research the Division has not neglected children. J. M. Lemon has been conducting numerous experiments to determine the food value of fish. The aim of one set of experiments has been to discover a palatable substitute for cod liver oil. Of all the liver oils the Division has worked with, the most potent discovered thus far—and this will surprise you—has been that of the swordfish. Swordfish oil is being commercialized now in the form of capsules. There already is on the market halibut liver oil capsules that children find easy to take. Fiedler gives his children halibut capsules.

U. S. Navy to Sell 8 Obsolete Vessels

The Navy destroyer Dyer, which carried President Roosevelt to Europe in 1918 when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was put up for sale yesterday along with seven other old vessels that have outlived their usefulness. According to the treaty of limitations and reductions of armament, signed at London in 1930, all these old boats must be scrapped, converted to hulks or sunk by December 31, 1936.

The destroyers to be disposed of, other than the Dyer, are the McKee, the Sampson, the Bush and the Stevens. Three outmoded submarine chasers also will be sold. All are resting in the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

After the Dyer had disembarked the then Secretary Roosevelt at Portsmouth, England, it remained in European waters, operating as an escort to troop transports and on patrol duty.

Sealed bids for the junk value of each of the boats will be opened at the Navy Department on August 27, it was said.

A Lineup of Pets at the Eaton Playground Show

A speckled entry known as "El Sloppo" won the turtle race, a genuine "tigger" broke out of its cage, a Maltese cat almost got Bobby's blue ribbon goldfish and a barking good time was had by all yesterday at the children's pet show in Eaton Playground, Thirty-fourth and Macomb streets northwest.

The exhibits, which were carried, pushed, wheeled and led to the playground from a half-mile radius, included a pair of ground squirrels, a white rabbit, a frog, goldfish and plenty cats and dogs. Also the "tigger," to quote from the label on its improvised cage, which inspection revealed to be a 6-week-old kitten.

Miss Virginia Junkin, playground supervisor, was kept busy throughout the contest settling disputes between rival cat fanciers, calling fouls in the turtle race and warning boys and girls to stay a safe distance from Carole Jackson's man-eating "tigger." Carole is 8 and lives at 3301 Macomb street.

Statue of Liberty Program on Radio

A song, "Miss Liberty," dedicated to the French Ambassador, Andre de Laboulaye, will be broadcast tomorrow from Bedloes Island, in New York Harbor, as the feature of a program celebrating the golden jubilee of the Statue of Liberty, the Interior Department announced yesterday.

Ambassador de Laboulaye, who is vacationing in France, has cabled Secretary Ickes his acceptance of the dedication of the song.

The words are taken from a poem by Leo Duran, poet-laureate of Paris, and the song is dedicated to the ambassador because his grandfather, M. Edouard de Laboulaye, conceived the idea of France presenting the famous statue to her sister republic, the United States. The broadcast will be over the NBC hook-up from 2 until 3 p. m.

U.S. Flogging Inquiry Biased, 'Victim' Claims

By the Associated Press.

An assertion the investigation by the Justice Department into the alleged flogging of Miss Willie Sue Blagden, Memphis, Tenn., social worker, was "biased" was made yesterday by Miss Blagden.

In a statement issued through the Washington committee to aid agricultural workers Miss Blagden said the investigation by Samuel Whitaker, special assistant to Attorney General Cummings, "is not the full, fair and judicial probe which we had a right to expect from the Department of Justice."

Cummings yesterday acted to send to a Little Rock, Ark., grand jury a report which he said contained evidence of possible violation of Federal peonage laws by Southern planters.

This proposal Miss Blagden said in her statement, "is proof of the claims of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union that peonage has been used by planters to break the recent strike, which had demanded $1.50 for a ten-hour day for cotton pickers. Wages were said to average about 75 cents a day now, from sunup to sundown."

Row May Reach Courts.

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 13 (AP).—The controversy between the Southern Tenant Farmers Union and east Arkansas planters appeared headed today into Federal courts in two Arkansas cities.

Counsel for the union, which sponsored the organization of white and colored sharecroppers in the Arkansas cotton country a few years ago, announced today three civil suits will be filed soon in Federal court at Jonesboro.

Pythians to Meet In Capital in 1938

The meeting in 1938 will be in the form of a seventy-fifth anniversary celebration, the group having been formed originally in Washington in 1864. More than 1,000 delegates are expected to attend.

CCC Youths Given Right to Drive Here

A regulation permitting drivers of CCC trucks from nearby Virginia to operate in Washington without District operator's licenses was agreed upon yesterday following a conference between Police Chief Ernest W. Brown, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and a representative of the Army Adjutant General's office.

The decision was made following a request from local courts that some provision be made for the drivers. Several legal entanglements have arisen recently following accidents in the District involving the CCC trucks, it was pointed out.

The drivers, Maj. Brown said, will be allowed to operate from nearby Virginia camps without District permits as long as they have an authorization card signed by the commanding officer of the camp. This is the same practice that is followed in Virginia.

Seized Gamblers Buy Orphans Bathing Suits

Twenty-two men seized in gambling raids lined up before Judge Thomas A. Green in South State Street Court. Said the magistrate:

"You're a bunch of gamblers and you're breaking the law, but I'll discharge you if you donate $20 each for the children of St. Vincent's."

The men of chance dug down in their pockets and found only $175. Judge Green accepted the sum, however, and Miss Bernadine Healy, director of the orphanage, said it would solve the bathing suit problem very nicely
